

Italo-Ethiopian Peace Presaged in London as Colson Leaves Nation

Maine Yankee, Who Handles Ethiopia's Foreign Affairs, Goes To Egypt on "Sick Leave," Will Return Soon.

ROME'S PROMISE

Mussolini's Own Newspaper Gives Promise to British on Rights to Lake Tana Waters.

(Copyright, 1936, by Associated Press) London, April 3.—Direct Italo-Ethiopian peace negotiations may be presaged, informed sources said, by the departure from Addis Ababa today of Everett A. Colson, Emperor Haile Selassie's most trusted and most important advisor.

The shrewd Maine Yankee who has guided Ethiopia's foreign affairs for six years announced at Addis Ababa that he was going to Egypt with Mrs. Colson on "sick leave," but that he intended to remain in the service of the government during that leave.

"I hope to return soon," Colson asserted. He left Addis Ababa only a week after the departure of Francis M. Rickett, the British oil promoter who negotiated a concession in Ethiopia, later abandoned by the American interests involved.

Rickett, before going to the Ethiopian capital on his latest trip, told this correspondent, "I hope to bring Colson out for a talk with a representative of Premier Mussolini in Egypt. Colson is the only man big enough for the job."

Rickett, like Colson, went from Addis Ababa to Egypt. The promoter has been interested in restoring peace to Ethiopia so that he might proceed with work on his concession. He saw Premier Mussolini at Rome before going to Addis Ababa.

Colson Sympathetic American and other diplomats in Europe and Africa heartily disapproved of Rickett's "meddling" in Italo-Ethiopian affairs, but Colson, himself a financier, has been sympathetic toward Rickett's practical viewpoint.

In addition, Ethiopian officials have become impatient at the League of Nations peace efforts. To his intimate friends, it was unbelievable that Colson would leave Addis Ababa at this critical juncture of the East African war unless he were undertaking an important mission.

The elderly advisor's heart has often given him serious trouble at Addis Ababa, because of the altitude, but heretofore he has always found relief by going to Bishoftu, 1,000 feet lower than Addis Ababa and only a two-hour train journey from the capital.

Gives Promise Milan, April 3.—Premier Mussolini's newspaper Popolo d'Italia, in a front-page article written in IL Duce's own style, formally confirmed today British rights to the waters of Lake Tana and the Blue Nile, and said Italy would respect them.

The editorial denied reports which it said appeared in British newspapers that the waters of Lake Tana and the Blue Nile would be devoted to provide Italy with an immense cotton area in that region and toward the Red Sea.

Troops at Lake Tana. Rome, April 3 (P).—The first Italian troops have reached Lake Tana, headquarters of the Blue Nile and center of British interests in Ethiopia, an informed source said today.

The Fascist forces pushed on toward Lake Tana, this source said, after occupying Gondar, the important Ethiopian city 30 miles north of the strategic lake.

Officials emphasized, in connection with the occupation of the Tana sector, west of the main northern battle ground, that Premier Mussolini's guarantee not to harm British interests still held good.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commander-in-chief of the East African armies, reported in an official communique that Eritrean forces had joined the motorized column under Achille Starace, secretary-general of the Fascist party, which took Gondar earlier in the week.

His communique said: "In the Lake Asehanzi sector (30 miles south of Amba Alaji, where Emperor Haile Selassie's personal troops withdrew after their first encounter Tuesday with the northern Italian army), the enemy are retreating to the south, pursued by our troops and bombarded by aviation."

The third Eritrean Brigade, commanded by General Cabedda, joined Starace's column, which is systematically the Gondar region.

Rabbi Noah Rosenthal's Death Was Accidental

Coroner Norvin R. Lasher has changed his verdict in the case of the death of Rabbi Noah Rosenthal, whose dead body was found in the Rondout creek Thursday morning, to one of death by accidental drowning. The coroner first gave a verdict of suicide by drowning, but upon further investigation and taking into consideration the condition of the body when found decided that all the facts pointed to Rabbi Rosenthal having been seized with a heart attack and fallen into the creek.

Funeral services for Rabbi Rosenthal were held at the late home, 101 Hone street, at two o'clock this afternoon, burial being in Agudas Achim cemetery.

Judge Culloton Beats Dittenheimer for State Committeeman

With more than 50 election districts heard from at the board of elections this morning, indications were that City Judge Bernard A. Culloton had defeated Emanuel Dittenheimer, Ellenville attorney, by a large majority for state committeeman in the primary election held Thursday.

The 50 districts, including the 13 wards in Kingston, had reported before noon, election officials in the various sections showing more action in making returns than in previous years.

Judge Culloton ran far ahead of Dittenheimer in Kingston, the latter carrying only one district, that being the second of the Fourth ward. He got 23 votes and Culloton 20.

Out in the country, Dittenheimer beat the judge in four of the 41 districts that had made returns before noon. He won in the first district of Gardiner, 17-14; the third of Olive, 5-3; the third of Saugerties, 45-15; and the third of Wawarsing, 37-34.

In the Eighth ward of Kingston, where Judge Culloton resides, he defeated Dittenheimer 67-3. Dittenheimer's own town, Wawarsing, reports at the election board showed, endorsed Culloton 225 to 133.

Mercy Verdict Expected In Case of Vera Stretz; Judge Instructs Jury

Death Sentence is Regarded as Remote; Collins Explains Theory of Reasonable Doubt Concerning Homicidal Killings.

ASKS ACQUITTAL

Leibowitz Tells Jury They've Got to Acquit Woman; His Record in Murder Cases.

New York, April 3 (P).—Judge Cornelius Collins began a three-hour charge to the jury in the Vera Stretz murder trial today, with death in the electric chair, a prison sentence, or acquittal as possible verdicts.

The death sentence, however, was regarded generally as remote in view of the fact that Miles O'Brien, assistant district attorney, did not specifically request it in his closing argument.

Miss Stretz, seated by Defense Attorney Samuel Leibowitz, appeared calm.

The courtroom was crowded, with many persons planning to remain until the jury brought in its verdict.

"The law stipulates," cautioned Judge Collins, "that you must be sure of the defendant's guilt beyond any reasonable doubt before you can return a verdict of guilty."

He explained at length what evidence would be needed to support verdicts of first degree murder, second degree murder and first degree manslaughter.

Miss Stretz Weeps As Judge Collins went through the phases of the law and began reviewing the evidence, Miss Stretz began crying. She put her handkerchief to her eyes and then rested her head on her left hand.

Repetition by the court of an epithet Gebhardt was alleged to have applied to Miss Stretz just before the shooting evoked fresh tears.

"The theory of reasonable doubt applies to each degree of homicide," said Judge Collins. "If you decide the homicide was not justifiable it does not necessarily follow the defendant is guilty of murder in the first degree."

O'Brien in his final summation to the jurors late yesterday contended Miss Stretz premeditated the slaying, but closed with the simple assertion: "I leave the case with you. Do as your conscience says."

Leibowitz previously had pleaded with the jury not to give a "compromise verdict."

Pleads for Acquittal "You've got to acquit her," Leibowitz shouted. "Not because you don't want to convict her but because the evidence does not warrant a conviction."

The 32-year-old blonde defendant sat weeping while her attorney told the jury she had a right to kill Dr. Gebhardt, whom Leibowitz described as a "fakir" and a "retard."

Miss Stretz had testified she had broken off her love affair with Dr. Gebhardt before the night of the slaying last November 12.

He tricked her to visit his expensive tower apartment that night, she said, under the pretext he was sick and needed her help.

When she arrived there, clad only in a nightgown, a coat and shoes, he overpowered and attacked her, she told the jurors, and then attempted to force her to submit to an unnatural assault.

Resisting him, she grabbed her revolver which he had kept in a bureau drawer. He was shot, she said, while they were struggling for possession of the weapon.

O'Brien described the young woman as "a kitten when stroked and a tigress when provoked."

The prosecutor intimated she killed Dr. Gebhardt out of resentment because he had failed to divorce his wife and marry her.

Lawyer's Record New York, April 3 (P).—Samuel Leibowitz, counsel for Vera Stretz in her trial on a murder charge, has obtained 115 acquittals in 113 murder cases which he has defended.

AGAIN PREPARES FOR DEATH

Prison Guards Again Prepare Convicted Killer for Execution at Trenton; Hoffman May Grant Reprieve This Evening.

BRUNO CALM

Bruno's Attitude One of Calm Confidence; Grand Jury Drops Wendel; Fisher Makes Bid.

Trenton, N. J., April 3 (P).—A close associate of Governor Harold G. Hoffman said today that the governor is prepared to grant Bruno Richard Hauptmann another reprieve.

The governor's secretary said, "The governor will not comment" on the report.

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, warden of the New Jersey state prison where Bruno Richard Hauptmann awaits death in the electric chair said today:

"As it stands now it looks as if the execution will go through."

Fisher Makes Attempt By DALE HARRISON (Copyright, 1936, by Associated Press)

Trenton, N. J., April 3.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's counsel lashed out shortly before noon today in a last desperate effort to save him from the electric chair, after the Mercer county grand jury had given notice it would not again seek to interfere with the Lindbergh baby killers' execution.

C. Lloyd Fisher, chief defense counsel demanded that the Hunterdon county grand jury be convened to consider charges that Paul H. Wendel, and not Bruno Hauptmann—kidnaped the famous baby.

He directed his demand to Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., the Hunterdon prosecutor, who has been most vigorous in the efforts to see that the Hauptmann death sentence be carried out. The execution is set for 8 o'clock tonight.

If Hauck refused to act, Fisher indicated, he might call on Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, the trial attorney, to order Hauck to convene the grand jury and to join him in an effort to stay the execution.

Swift Reaction The development brought swift reaction. Hauck said he would confer with the attorney-general, David T. Wilentz immediately to determine what to do. He reiterated he would oppose any move to delay the execution.

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, warden of the prison where final preparations have been made for the execution, came to the attorney-general's office shortly afterward, and it was apparent that another of the interminable climax of the famous case was drawing near.

Colonel Kimberling said shortly after noon that "as it stands now, it looks as though the execution will go through," but that he would have a further statement at 2:30 p. m.

"From my dumb knowledge of the case, I am not sure it is settled," the warden said, referring to the Wendel "confession" angles and the grand jury investigation.

When he left the attorney-general's office he said he had been promised a legal opinion as to his own position in the complicated and bewildering situation.

Has Death Warrant The one thing certain was that the warden had in his possession a death warrant calling upon him to execute Hauptmann before the end of the week of March 30—midnight tomorrow or midnight Sunday, he was not sure which—and that some legal agency higher than himself would be needed to halt tonight's execution beyond the period specified in the death warrant.

Fisher's demand on the Hunterdon prosecutor to act was based on the opinion that the crime of which Wendel is accused—a crime for which the grand jury of Mercer county declined last night to indict—was committed in Hunterdon county and therefore called for action there.

Justice Trenchard, the trial judge, declined as recently as Tuesday to stay the execution, commenting that the Wendel "confession" was "incredible."

Attorney-General Wilentz, with whom Hauck conferred after receiving the Fisher request, was chief prosecutor of Hauptmann and has never deviated from his belief that Hauptmann—and Hauptmann alone—did the Lindbergh kidnapping.

The action, however, was seen as a development which Governor Harold G. Hoffman might regard as sufficiently important to move him to extend a second reprieve to the prisoner—whose head already has been shaved a second time for the executioner's electrode.

Attorney General Wilentz has described the Wendel development as "the vilest, lowest, meanest fraud of the entire Hauptmann case," and the Mercer grand jury which listened for two days to much testimony concerning the charges against Wendel

William O'Reilly Re-elected Head Of Central Business

At the annual meeting of the Central Business Men's Association, Thursday night, William O'Reilly, newsdealer and stationer, was re-elected president by a unanimous vote of the organization which gathered in the Y. M. C. A. for the session.

Other officers of the association, elected last night, unanimously to serve for the ensuing year, are: Frank L. Brown, vice president; R. B. Deyo, secretary, and Henry Bruck, treasurer.

When election of directors was held, the same set was retained for another year: J. H. Gregory, Harry Walker, R. M. Nelson, C. A. Miller and Monroe Southard.

The business men discussed the practice of switching on the New York Central Railroad crossing on Broadway, condemning the practice concerning which they voted to take up with the railroad officials in an effort to have it discontinued.

It was also moved to communicate with Mayor Conrad J. Heiselein, asking him to continue his fight against eliminating the Broadway crossing by depressing the street.

West Shore, coal dealer, near the street, expressed himself as very much against depressing the street, which he said would be spoiled entirely.

President O'Reilly urged support for the Industrial Minister Show to be staged in Reade's Kingston Theatre, May 1, to raise funds to bring industries to Kingston. "This enterprise is worthy of the united support of all local business men," he said.

Through power given him by the association, President O'Reilly will appoint a committee to start a drive for new members.

"Most Beautiful Women." New York, April 3 (P).—Secretary Frances Perkins, Minister Ruth Bryan Owen, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Katharine Cornell and Helen Hayes were called America's most beautiful women today by Countess Mira Skarbek De Korybska, internationally known portrait painter.

"These women do not have skin-deep beauty, which is the usual conception," she said. "There is intellectual beauty which does not fade." She based her choices, she said, on her experience in painting nobiles.

British Angered London, April 3 (P).—Shocked and angered by the receipt of what it considers irretrievable proof that the Italians are using poison gas in Ethiopia, the British government in London tonight said it is preparing to make an oil embargo against Italy unless he agrees to a quick cessation of hostilities.

Comedian Is Killed. London, Conn., April 2 (P).—David Robinson, 24-year-old Wadsworth comedian of Providence, R. I., was struck and fatally injured early today by an automobile. Dr. Dean appeared in a Bridgeport theatre last night. He was struck by the car as he crossed the street after leaving the automobile in which he was returning to Stamford.

Brooklyn Requests Presence of Wendel To Capture Kidnapers

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 3 (P).—District Attorney William Geoghan said he expected "important developments" today in connection with Paul Wendel's story that he was kidnapped and forced to sign a Lindbergh abduction "confession."

Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey, Geoghan said, agreed that Wendel could come to Brooklyn to help officers trail the four men he declared held him prisoner and tortured him.

A cleaning establishment which pressed Wendel's suit during the ten days he said he was held prisoner in an Emmons avenue house has been located, Geoghan added. He declined to disclose its name.

The district attorney instructed his assistant, William McGuinness, to go to Trenton at once. Wendel was expected to return with him, escorted by New Jersey State Police.

Wendel's story of being forced to sign the confession, which he later repudiated, was found true as far as the investigation has gone, Geoghan announced.

A Brooklyn lawyer, he said, apparently is involved in the case. Wendel will try to point out the house in which he said he was held from February 14 to 24.

Officials have narrowed the search for the building to Emmons avenue. They also are looking for a woman McGuinness said who is believed to be a member of the gang.

The woman paid Wendel's bill of $7.50 at the Hotel Stanford on February 21, McGuinness said. He announced Wendel, if he makes the trip, would stop at the Rogues' Gallery in New York police headquarters to try to identify his abductors.

McGuinness, who visited Wendel in Trenton earlier in the week, said the disbarred lawyer had offered to come to Brooklyn if cleared of the Lindbergh murder charge placed against him in New Jersey.

Wendel told McGuinness that four men took him from in front of his hotel to the Emmons avenue house, where they tortured him by holding lighted cigarettes close to his eyes and by refusing to let him sleep.

"The serious thing about this case is not only the kidnapping and torture of Wendel," said District Attorney Geoghan, "but also whether someone planned this whole thing—and who the planners are."

Police were trying to trace a blue linen elevator tag taken from Wendel's suit. He said he had the suit sent out to be cleaned while he was held captive in the hope the cleaner's mark might give an essential clue to the location of the house.

Officers were checking every dry cleaning establishment in Brooklyn. Wendel told McGuinness that the torture became so great during his ten-day confinement that he finally agreed to sign the Lindbergh kidnapping confession, which he later repudiated. He charges he then was taken to the home of County Detective Ellis Parker at Mount Holly, N. J.

HITLER SYMBOLS SCRATCHED UPON COINS IN AUSTRIA

Vienna, (AP)—Money, passing from hand to hand, is an increasing means of Nazi propaganda in Austria.

The silver five-schilling piece bears an image of the Virgin Mary. A cross hangs from a chain about the neck. A favorite trick of the propagandists is to scratch the cross with a pin or knife so that it becomes a swastika.

The Austrian ten-schilling note bears a picture of a peasant girl. Horrified authorities noted recently that Nazi artists in hundreds of instances had given her a "Hitler mustache."

Notes and coins so mutilated, the government has decreed, are worthless. Banks and government cashiers will not accept them. The defaced coins may be turned in for the comparatively small value of the silver they contain. But the pretty girl with the mustache is a total loss.

The Nazi defacement of money has slowed up business transactions. The merchant examines every coin and note carefully while busy cashiers at theatres and movies are driven to distraction.

Foreigners often find, after a day's shopping, that they have accumulated money which even beggars scorn.

Old Fashioned Radio Sets Relied Upon to Prevent Vote Riots In Venezuela

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Caracas, Venezuela (AP)—Old-fashioned American radio receiving sets, equipped with batteries, may be the medium to save democracy-seeking Venezuela from disorders and bloodshed at the presidential election on April 19.

Since aged Juan Vicente Gomez, long absolute dictator, died in December, popular demonstrations against the remnants of his tyrannical regime have cost the lives of many people and resulted in the destruction of rich properties.

The present chief executive, General Eleazar Lopez Contreras, candidate for re-election, has promised the public that there shall be no more dictatorships but at last only "true rule by the people."

Illiteracy Forms Barrier

Communism, brought secretly by outside agents, has added to the dangers of this period of political metamorphosis. The great problem of the president is to satisfy the people that their country is being returned to their hands, and to inspire a spirit of cooperation until the election has made it possible for him to inaugurate the program he has promised.

In order to achieve this, it is necessary for Lopez Contreras to present his views in an intimate way to the populace. But vast numbers of the citizens are illiterate and therefore the printed word will not serve his purpose.

There remains only the appeal by word of mouth. And the battery-powered American radio sets have come to the rescue in a land where electricity virtually is unknown outside the cities.

Voice Reaches Jungle Folk

Several thousand receivers have been imported, and the president has sent these into the four corners of the country, to be installed in public places so that his people may hear him speak personally.

So in the evenings, the quiet but firm voice of the new leader reaches even to the mining camps in the inhospitable jungles of the Orinoco.

The election date, April 19, happens to be Venezuela's independence day, anniversary of its declaration of freedom from Spain in 1810. It is partly because of the sentiment attached to this date that the authorities fear trouble, for it would be an opportune day for agitators.

The part that communism is to play is hard to estimate. It is disclosed that foreign red agents have been working in the country districts for a long time.

That their presence was not discovered while Gomez was alive is considered strange, for the wily old dictator maintained an elaborate spy system. But while he had paid agents in every home of consequence, in every business house and at the keyholes of most hotel rooms in Caracas and other towns, he never figured that danger to his rule might develop among the people.

Gen. Eleazar Lopez Contreras, provisional president of Venezuela, is a candidate for regular election.

People Recall Defender

The foreign agents outguessed him. Knowing they couldn't operate in the towns, they turned to the haciendas, the oil fields and the mines. West Indian negroes, Spaniards and Germans sifted into those regions disguised as peddlers. How many converts they made probably will be demonstrated at the polls.

Although Provisional President Lopez Contreras was minister of war in Gomez' cabinet and considered the dictator's right hand man, he is popular. On the occasion of student disorders of half a dozen years ago, he refused to let the troops fire on crowds of demonstrators, although others in the regime would have staged a slaughter. The man in the street remembers that.

The greatest distrust seems centered on the present congress. Its membership was hand-picked by Gomez. One of the duties of the national legislature is to elect the president, so much of the pre-election fight is centered on the contests for congressional seats.

That "rail 16" of the kidnap leader Governor Hoffman has been investigating looks like the third rail.

Borah Seeking Probe of WPA

Washington, April 3 (AP)—Senator Borah (R., Ind.) today sought an investigation "into all phases of the WPA" as a result of charges of politics in the New Deal's relief set-up.

Borah's demand came yesterday about the same time that Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, declared that he had "yet to see the case" where "a fellow got his job on relief rolls because of politics."

"I don't see why anyone should be afraid of having an investigation," said Borah after the Senate audit committee indefinitely postponed action on the Davis resolution for an inquiry into WPA.

"It should be an open inquiry and go into all phases of WPA. I have received letters from citizens complaining against the relief organization, as have other senators."

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the majority leader, declared there was no need for another inquiry in view of the authority given a special campaign funds investigating committee, not yet named, to look into relief fund complaints.

Marriage Advice Bureau Opened in Ohio College

Toledo, Ohio.—Three years ago A. D. Grigby began giving weekly lectures on marriage at night school in the University of Toledo.

Today Grigby sits at the desk of his new "Marriage and Family Counseling bureau." It is a full time job now.

The bureau's outlook is promising, for on the first day three perplexed persons brought marital problems to him for advice. Grigby, affable and bald, indignantly refuses the suggestion that his is a match-making bureau. One gets advice, not husbands and wives in his office, he says.

The bureau, he says, is operated like a legal or medical office. The client reveals his problem, and attempts to untangle the knot.

Grigby's father was a "marrying parson" and that's the source of the whole affair. Some of the thousands of unions his father formed didn't endure, and that worried the parson.

Republicans Repulse First Borah Assault

headquarters, remained in his office into the early hours of today to receive the reports telling how the Borah candidates for convention seats trailed far behind in the Empire state.

Bachmann declared the New York primary could not be described as "a true test of strength" for the Idahoan, adding that the Illinois test April 14 "will tell a different story."

Senator Borah was entered in nine of the 43 districts in New York. Incomplete returns from the 15th district showed the regulars enjoying a wide advantage over Representative Fish and William Ziegler, Jr., leaders in the states Borah organization. The regulars also led in the other eight districts by large margins.

The regulars had pitted unpledged party candidates against the Borah backers. The Idahoan has expressed bitter opposition to unpledged, "favorite son" delegations.

Concentrates On Illinois

Bachmann said he now is concentrating on Illinois, where Borah will contest with Colonel Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, in the first out-and-out primary struggle between two avowed Republican candidates.

Backers of both have forecast victory to their candidate.

The main Republican convention yesterday endorsed a slate of 13 delegates to the Cleveland convention who are unpledged but favorable to Colonel Knox "as long as he has a chance."

The eighth Virginia district convention instructed its two delegates yesterday to vote for Landon.

Other political developments.

Republican Chairman Henry P. Fletcher said the only outstanding issue of the campaign is "The question whether we shall go forward in an orderly manner and by constitutional processes in working out our problems by the trial and error method."

Senator Schwellenbach (D-Wash.), in a radio address, assailed the New Deal's foe, the American Liberty League.

He attributed the league's opposition to the administration to a combination of the duPont family's financial support and New Deal efforts to keep the United States out of war.

"What is the business of the duPonts? It is the manufacture of munitions, the sordid business of war," said Schwellenbach. He said that of the $485,000 contributed to the Liberty League last year, $270,000 came from the duPont family.

Election Victory

New York, April 3 (AP)—One of the victorious candidates in the Norman Thomas faction of the Socialist party in yesterday's primary contest against the rightwing "old guard" was Margaret I. Lamont. A leftwing Socialist, she is the wife of Corlies Lamont and a daughter-in-law of Thomas W. Lamont, a senior partner in J. P. Morgan & Company. She was elected a delegate to the national convention.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH US?

What's the matter with people nowadays? Thoughtful men and women realize that there is something wrong with modern civilization, or with the way we live. Alexis Carrel, the famous surgeon and author of "Man the Unknown," says in a talk at Los Angeles:

It appears that our resistance to fatigue, to sorrow, to worry, has decreased. Modern men need much sleep, good food, good houses. Their nervous system is delicate. They do not endure the worries of business, the responsibilities and the sufferings of life. They easily break down.

Some unknown factors in our material and mental surroundings are doubtless responsible for the fragility of our nervous tissues. Mental diseases by themselves are more numerous than all other diseases put together.

Intelligence and morality do not appear to have markedly increased in spite of the immense amount of money spent on education.

He wants to see the emphasis of educational effort turned for a while away from machinery and material sciences and focused on man himself, until wise men really understand what man is and how he ought to live. He suggests that institutions of learning "give a few individuals the possibility of retiring temporarily to solitude, meditating about basic problems, as monks do in their monasteries, or elaborating the knowledge needed for the constitution of a better world." It might be a grand idea, provided the ablest and wisest men were chosen for this job, and provided the rest of us believed them when they finally came out of their scholarly seclusion and told us what to do.

GUNS FOR THE DARDANELLES.

One thing leads to another swiftly in Europe these days. Turkey's foreign minister has politely asked the Council of the League of Nations to consider the reformation of the Dardanelles Straits. None of the allied attempts to take the Dardanelles or the Gallipoli Peninsula during the World War succeeded, but the straits were demilitarized later by the Treaty of Lausanne. Turkey is, of course, merely following Germany's example, though in a tactful and diplomatic way. The Turkish minister makes no threats. He disclaims any intention on his country's part of taking direct action, as Germany has done. Peaceful negotiation is the method. If the other powers will be reasonable.

Turkey has been very good lately. When Great Britain called for a show of hands by the Mediterranean powers last fall, she agreed to help in case Italy attacked the British fleet. And only the other day, again, Turkey stood by the League in voting for the resolution condemning Germany's action in the Rhineland. There doesn't seem to be any clear reason for rearming the Dardanelles, since Turkey says she does not wish to shut off commerce there in time of peace, or even in time of war if she is a neutral. Why rearm them, then? The only answer seems to be, "Everybody's doing it."

BAITING ALIENS.

Deportation is a game that both sides can play. This idea doesn't seem to have occurred to some Americans who have been urging drastic action in deportation cases pending at Washington. Many who do understand it have been trying to save nearly 2,000 men and women from deportation under the Roosevelt law. These cases, the immigration statute has provided, are merely technical. The persons concerned are said to be of good character, and would be eligible to return as soon as they obtained quota status in their own countries. Meanwhile they would be separated in a great many cases from their families here and be exposed to hardship and injustice.

Another example of alien-baiting that could work both ways is an amendment urged upon the Senate immigration committee to compel the admission of any alien entering the country.

10 days in jail for any offense whatever. Labor leaders protest that such a law might be used to run workmen out of the country through arrests on trivial pretexts during strikes. In any case, wholesale expulsion of aliens without good grounds would certainly bring retaliation against Americans living or traveling abroad.

UNPLEASANT QUALITIES.

It isn't our good qualities that put us ahead, if we're successful, so much as freedom from qualities that would hold us back, according to Dr. Blake Crider, head of the psychology department of Penn College, New York. Most of us are competent enough, if we would give ourselves a chance. Two-thirds of the job failures are due to unfortunate personal peculiarities. He would test people by a couple of dozen questions like these:

Is he a gusher?
 Is he too tight with his money?
 Does he get too familiar on slight acquaintance?

Is he always trying to be funny?
 Is he a goodly-goody person?
 Are his feelings easily hurt?

Does he consider himself superior to others?
 Is he too bold in correcting others' mistakes?

Is he a groucher?
 Does he talk too much?
 Does he flatter people unnecessarily?

Does he borrow too frequently?
 Does he boast of his accomplishments?
 Is he callous to the troubles of others?

Does he brood over personal grievances?
 Does he do what he says he will do?
 Does he go out of his way to help others?

Can he see a joke on himself?
 Any thoughtful person can add a few others from his own experience and observation.

LEAVING MENTAL HOSPITAL.

We are all naturally concerned when we think of the large number of patients in our mental hospitals; that there are more patients in these hospitals than in all other hospitals combined.

However, if we think for a moment we at once realize that when patients enter a mental hospital it is always for weeks, months or years; some remain till old age.

In our other hospitals the stay is for day or weeks, sometimes perhaps for months.

This means of course that the patients in the ordinary hospitals always come out again and usually in a short time, so that the number who enter is naturally much larger than those who enter mental hospitals.

However, even in mental hospitals, six of every ten entering are permitted to return home, which compared with former years is very encouraging.

One of the difficulties the authorities in mental hospitals meet is when the family wish to have the patient back home before it is considered safe or wise to let him leave the institution.

If the patient is one who gets greatly excited the family are usually willing to let him remain in the institution, but when he is quiet and apparently just depressed, the family naturally believe that his home surroundings would affect a complete cure. And sometimes they are right.

Dr. L. Minski, in Journal of Mental Science, London, states that of 90 patients who left the Maudsley Hospital and went home against advice, 17 cannot be traced, 25 are in mental hospitals, 24 have recovered, 16 are at home and no better, seven committed suicide, and one died at home.

Naturally the way the patient was behaving or seemed to be behaving so influenced the relatives that they thought he was ready to leave the institution or would do better at home, and for this reason the largest number taken home while still ill were suffering from depression of spirits, in which condition they are not likely to be quarrelsome or cause so much upsetment at home.

The point to remember is that mental institutions are crowded and are only too anxious to allow patients to return home. Relatives can thus be assured that when the patient is ready to go, he will be sent home.

Broadcasts From French Shrine.

Lisieux, France. (AP)—Devotees of the "Little Flower" are now brought in radiophonic pilgrimage to her shrine. Broadcasters from Saint Therese's station take place the first Thursday of each month and consist of a talk by some priest and an artistic program, the aim being to make the saint better known, to encourage prayer and to inspire pilgrimage to her shrine.

Accepts Endow Irish Hospitals.

Bulfinch (AP)—A plan to reorganize the hospitals of the Irish Free State with $40,000,000 raised from expropriated lands has been accepted by a government commission. Since the swine flu epidemic six years ago, the hospitals' share has been $20,000,000.

Scattered returns indicate that a higher death rate in the general population of the United States was recorded for the winter months of 1935 than for the same months of 1934.

Golden Rain

by Margaret Wilder

SYNOPSIS: Iris Lanning, taken from the restricted life of an impetuous aristocrat in Paris, is the girl who lives in New York, finds herself having a great time, and a surprising one too. She has just learned that big, awkward Ollie Winslow is a poet, in fact she is reading some of her work. Camilla, incidentally, has tried tactfully to show Iris how empty much of her present life is—without the least success.

Chapter 18
 BODY BLOW

IRIS looked up, her eyes full of tears. "You do beautiful work," she said. "Have you typed them and sent them out?"

Her father had done a little verse, and some art criticisms; she knew the procedure. Aunt Ella had typed clear beautiful copies on a little typewriter she bought, and had made a card index for sending and resending.

"Oh, I wouldn't dare!"

"Yes, you would. That's silly. I'll tell you just how to do it."

She began a matter-of-fact description of Aunt Ella's routine. Camilla stared at her, her dark face lighted with excitement; to the excitement was added another expression—that reminds me—about the old music books you said you sang those songs from. He said Mr. Black would be coming over soon and he'd send them by him."

"Iris's heart leaped. To see Morgan—to talk to him again!"

"When?"

"I don't know. When his lady-love desires, I gather. It seems he's decided to settle down in Paris for life with a girl named—was it Katie Oliver?"

"Katie Oliver." Iris's voice was steady. She hoped her face was too. "Are you sure?"

"Well, nothing's sure but death and income taxes; I've only Will's word of it." Phina said carelessly. "Make it a heart."

Iris hoped she made her own bid in a voice that showed nothing. Men were like that. If you told them you didn't love them they found another girl who did. She hadn't known how sure she had felt of Morgan's continued love; that she could write, telephone, walk in any moment, and find his love waiting there for her, as sure and indestructible as her family. She hadn't known she cared as much as this.

IRIS jumped as the house telephone rang. It might be Morgan. But it was "a man with a package," the known bootlegger's formula.

sion that had never been there before—hope.

Just then Owen came in, whistling; a tune Iris knew in even this short time meant a few minutes of stolen leave with Sigrid; it was a Norwegian folksong, his unconscious Sigrid-motiv. Camilla, poor girl, could not know. Iris saw her hands tremble, saw her turn eagerly. She was at her worst with Owen.

He greeted her with that slow kindness which he gave everyone and cast a look at his sister which meant "get rid of her."

So presently poor Camilla went, eager, hurt to the last moment.

"Don't forget about the poetry," Iris said. It seemed all the comfort she could give her. Camilla squeezed her hand gratefully, and was gone.

"Good!" said Owen, with a man's hardness, dropping on a chair.

"Thanks for getting her out, Iris. You're a swell girl." He reached for a cigarette. "Any designs I make for the Camel are well-earned money. Believe it or not."

"Oh, Owen! She's mad about you. And she is a real poet, I believe. She showed me some of her poetry."

BUT he strode off to change for dinner. Iris realized it was time she dressed too. She knew well enough that a heart of gold inside poor Camilla's nervous body had no chance against Sigrid's beautiful little Northern face with its wheels of silvery hair.

Learning a hard-fighting game of bridge was the thing Iris liked least. Phina was firm about it; she adored bridge herself, and besides, as she pointed out, not being able to play it well was as bad as having dowdy clothes.

The three of them, with Honora called in, as she often was, to make a fourth, were playing a practice game one snowy January night.

"Too stormy to go to the show," Phina had decreed; "we'll work up your game a little."

They were sitting near the fire in the silver room, and Iris, a little drowsy with the fire and the drop ping cards, waited after a while.

"You'd play a fair game if you took it more seriously," her aunt said. "Who taught you?"

"Morgan Black." Her mind flew back to Morgan, teaching her the beginning of contract with Uncle Will. Outwardly a little rough with her, but how gentle with her mistakes, how admiring, how proud, when she played cleverly!

"Oh, yes, I wrote Will the other day—that reminds me—about the old music books you said you sang those songs from. He said Mr. Black would be coming over soon and he'd send them by him."

"Iris's heart leaped. To see Morgan—to talk to him again!"

"When?"

"I don't know. When his lady-love desires, I gather. It seems he's decided to settle down in Paris for life with a girl named—was it Katie Oliver?"

"Katie Oliver." Iris's voice was steady. She hoped her face was too. "Are you sure?"

"Well, nothing's sure but death and income taxes; I've only Will's word of it." Phina said carelessly. "Make it a heart."

Iris hoped she made her own bid in a voice that showed nothing. Men were like that. If you told them you didn't love them they found another girl who did. She hadn't known how sure she had felt of Morgan's continued love; that she could write, telephone, walk in any moment, and find his love waiting there for her, as sure and indestructible as her family. She hadn't known she cared as much as this.

IRIS jumped as the house telephone rang. It might be Morgan. But it was "a man with a package," the known bootlegger's formula.

"That bootlegger does come at the most unearliest hours," Phina said. "Why he had to see eleven-thirty when we're in the middle of repeal, only he knows. Tell him to come up. Honora."

Iris leaned back in her place with a look which her aunt misinterpreted as one of relief at the game's end. She laughed.

"My dear, Allan Beckley is one of the best players in the city," she said. "You don't want him to think you're a dud."

"If he's such a pasha that I have to learn bridge to please him I don't think much of him!" Iris retorted. "Like a child."

"There's the elevator, Iris. You talk to him. He's so frightfully conversational," said Phina. "Come on, Owen."

But it was Morgan who stood there—Morgan Black, quite at his ease in a dark overcoat he had never seen, an opera hat in his gloved hand, and the unmistakable square shape of Grandmother Lanning's 1870 music books under the other arm.

"Good evening, Iris; I hope I'm not too late in delivering this. I couldn't get away from the people I was dining with till just now."

She had been prepared for any Morgan but this sophisticated person with the light note of pleasant acquaintance in his voice. But after all—if Phina was right—this was the only Morgan she'd see from now on.

"Not too late a bit," she smiled. She did not know how sophisticated, how controlled she herself looked standing there slim and smart from her perfectly done waves to her red satin sandals. Demi-toilette for evenings at home; was Phina's rule; tonight Iris wore a close-fitting red robe of deceptive simplicity; showing every beautiful line of her slim body.

I might point out, too, that we have paid access to facts relative to salaries paid to public officials and employees, and are therefore in a position to secure returns and payments from every one of them.

Glasgow, Scotland (AP)—In Glasgow's new street directory "Pillar of Truth" has displaced "Montgomery Terrace" and at one of the street corners a tablet names Simon Bolivar as "the liberator of Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador and Peru."

South Africa (AP)—The government has approved a grant of $,000,000 for the relief of the unemployed in the South Union in an effort to change them from nomads to settled farmers. Land for farming is to be made available to the unemployed number approximately $,000,000.

SHOKAN

Shokan, April 2—Herman Wendt, Jr., who spent the winter at Woodside, L. I., is making spring improvements at his store and filling station on the state road.

Mrs. May Giles came up from Kingston Tuesday to prepare her house for new tenants. It is reported that Eling Gray and family of Ashokan will remove to the Giles place.

Robert Dawson left for New Haven Sunday after spending a vacation at home. Young Dawson, who is a Yale freshman, returned early in order to do some spring crew practice.

Miss Elizabeth Giles is home again after having spent the winter in Poughkeepsie.

Long wooden sap spiles in the maple trees in front of several homes bring to mind the old village with its almost continuous mile-long row of big maples from which protruded spouts made of sumach and elder.

Nearly every villager made a pansy syrup each spring, using milk pans, cracked butter jars and what not, for catching the sap. Very few care to bother with this pleasant task any more.

Mrs. Leah Van Benschoten has gone to New Jersey for a visit with friends. Lawrence Spencer and family, who resided at Mrs. Van Benschoten's during the winter, have gone back to their bungalow on the north boulevard.

Joe Aaronofsky, well-known Olive Bridge butcher and cattle buyer, and Mrs. Aaronofsky were callers here Tuesday.

News of the sudden death Tuesday evening of Clarence Moe came as a great shock to the residents of the town villages. Mr. Moe, a retired farmer, had not been confined to the house, though for a day or two preceding his fatal attack he had not been feeling well.

Mr. and Mrs. Hazzie Wager of the state road were hosts at a small card party Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Nadal of Poughkeepsie spent Sunday at the home of Mr. Nadal's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Baptiste Nadal.

April 3, 1936. Olive-Ashokan-Glenford section news notes: Joseph Whipple of Wittenberg has removed to Shokan. Mrs. Carrie Van Kleeck is moving to Kingston. Mrs. Mary Peck, who has been ill so long, seems to show no improvement. If Hansenlew has moved in the tenant house of Mrs. W. Lee Elder Jr. Matthews of Kingston preached in the old school Baptist Church Sunday.

Edward Davis, Jr., expects to be employed on the railroad after April 1. Mrs. William Miller of Kingston has been spending a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dederick. Mrs. Hattie Caldwell of Kingston visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Delamater, last week.

Apples are selling for $1 a barrel.

Plans are under way for an egg hunt following the next meeting of the True Blue Club on April 9. Refreshments will be served in connection with this affair as is the custom of the club at every second meeting in the month.

Members of the Shokan Home Bureau have received questionnaires, sent out by the county demonstration agent with a view to getting facts for making an analysis of the general Home Bureau membership.

The exhibit in a Wall street window of pheasants and other specimens from the stuffed birds collection of the Hon. Charles W. Walton is especially interesting to residents of the Olive-Hurley line section where Mr. Walton resides as a boy. The "senator" is very nearly a summer resident of Shokan, his mountain retreat on Tonce being just over the town line in Hurley.

Mrs. Philinda Beesmer is able to get around again following her recent illness.

The Shokan school has recently lost two pupils in Donald and Margaret Burke who last week removed to Montgomery.

The baby chick season has started early here this year. Otto Grossman took off a big hatch Sunday. Leonard Ruckert and Harvey Silkworth have a hundred chicks at their poultry ranch in the village center. At the Elmendorf custom hatchery more than 100 chicks each have gone out to Reginald Davis and Mrs. C. A. Winchell. April-hatched chickens are becoming increasingly popular with our poultry keepers.

The old maples on the Kreeker place were not tapped this season. Some of these patriarchs of the sugar bush are four and five feet in diameter and probably were tapped a hundred years ago. It is not unusual in the Butternutkill valley, to run across specimens of acer saccharum that are so peppered with tap wounds as to almost preclude further borings in sound wood. Also, on scores of old places along the mountain slopes, one can find the crumbling remains of stone fireplaces, used by past generations of farmers in heating their sap pans and iron pots. Like the lonely lilac bushes and tiger lily beds, these trees and stones mute attest the simple life as our forefathers lived it.

ENTIRE KORAN MEMORIZED BY MUSLIMS IN AFRICA

Johannesburg, So. Africa (AP)—Fifty of the Muslims from India who live here claim to have memorized the complete Koran, holy book of the Mohammedans, with its more than 2,000,000 words.

Mohide Ebrahim Sanjaid, head of the Mohammedan chief mosque, said he began learning the Koran by heart as soon as he could read. He has read nothing else.

"I took me nearly three years to memorize the 4,665 messages in the Koran," he said. "Some of these messages take more than five minutes to deliver."

Shokan Ladies' Aid in April Meeting

Shokan, April 2—The April meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Shokan Reformed Church took place Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Auer Longyear.

The meeting was opened with the singing of the hymn, "Is My Name Written There?" Next followed a prayer and Bible reading by Mrs. Daniel Sampson, president of the Aid. Mrs. Charles Giles and Mrs. Fred Adair, secretary and treasurer respectively, gave their reports. The treasurer reported a donation of $18.25 to the Red Cross flood relief fund and $25 on the society's church quota. Each member then responded to the roll call with a verse from the Scripture. The ladies decided to hold a variety supper in the church basement on Friday evening, April 17, beginning at 6 o'clock. The supper committee appointed is as follows: Mrs. Frank Barringer, chairman; Mrs. William Tuckling and Mrs. Herbert Dibbell, a flower committee, composed of Mrs. Clyde Winchell, chairman; Miss Elizabeth Giles and Miss Edna Longyear, were appointed for the securing and arranging of the church decorations at Easter time. Members of the church are requested to lend potted plants for this occasion and, if they desire, to notify the committee to call for the plants. The business session was concluded by a general singing of the hymn, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds." At the social hour, refreshments, consisting of hot cross buns, cake, coffee and tea, were served by Mrs. Longyear and Miss Edna Longyear. Members of the Aid who attended Wednesday's meeting were the following: Mrs. Daniel Sampson, Mrs. Santi Nadal, Mrs. Fred Adair, Mrs. Homer Markle, Mrs. Clyde Winchell, Mrs. Gould Person, Mrs. Elizabeth Giles, Mrs. Frank Barringer, Mrs. Beattie Davis, Mrs. Sarah Bell, Mrs. Charles Giles, Mrs. August Pharo and Mrs. William Tuckling. Mrs. Herbert Dibbell and Mrs. Frank Lane were present as guests. The May meeting of the society will be held at Mrs. Tuckling's.

Let's Pretend

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

The instinct to act seems to be born in mankind. A child likes nothing better than to dress up and pretend he is someone else. The enterprising parent will turn this instinct to good use, and save herself many tedious hours of planning and carrying out amusements for the children. Given a few costumes and a collection of the children will amuse themselves for hours, especially if they are girls, for in them the dramatic and imitative sense seems stronger than in boys.

Mrs. K. keeps a collection of dress ups for the youngsters. There are outmoded evening dresses, shabby evening slippers, scarfs, veils, fans, gloves, discarded negligees, artificial flowers, last year's cheap costume jewelry which she bought at the five and ten, Xmas ribbons, all the clothing, in fact, which is out-dated but not suitable to give away. Sometimes she even makes an exception and gives a costume and slippers to the collection, or spends a few pennies for a gay string of beads or a cheap hat frame. It is easier to do this and costs less than to take a group of small girls to the movies, and Molly X always has a troop of visitors.

Perhaps, one reason she has so many is the charm of the dress up box. The children all go into Molly's room, open the box and spend hours at the entrancing game of being someone else. Occasionally a princess will emerge from the room on some errand, or a whole group of fantastic strangers will arrive in the kitchen asking for cookies and lemonade. Once or twice the family and friends have been treated to an original play staged by Molly and her play-mates.

Such amusements cost very little, but they develop imagination and invention in the children who share them.

The Baldwin apple led in popularity in a recent vote of large group of farm women to determine what native grown apples were best suited to baking and sauce. Other favorites were the McIntosh, Cortland, and Northern Spy.

MODES OF THE MOMENT

Spring glove styles endorse colorful fabrics.
Siana Murwin

The new styles, show white gloves much in favor, especially in kid, or doekin, many featuring smart trimmings and stitching in navy or black for contrast.

New fabric gloves, however, are very colorful in keeping with the trend to gay and brightly hued accessories. Matching the scarf, bag and gloves in a bright shade to contrast or harmonize with the costume is a smart note.

At the bottom, is shown one of the effective "button back" models in white kid. The body of the glove is all white with self trim in a butterfly design at the top of the cuff and it fastens with a link button at the back.

The fabric glove sketched at the top stresses the new "shortie" style—it is particularly smart in green, and shows a smart wing effect at the back, fastening with a large pearl button of matching color.

The other fabric glove is by Du-bonnet, and sports a flared cuff and a back strap which passes through a metal ring to fasten with a self-covered button at the back of the hand.

In County Granges

Plattekill

Regular meeting of Plattkill Grange was held at the Grange Hall on Saturday evening, March 28.

"Charter members' night was celebrated in honor of the organization of the Grange on March 29, 1902. Four charter members were present: Mrs. Charles Johnson, Mrs. Laura Minard, James B. Palmer and Frank Losier.

The program opened with a welcome by the lecturer, Dorothy Sims. Gertrude Kopaske read an anniversary song written by Mrs. Charles Everett. Community singing of "Beautiful Grange" was followed by a report on legislation by Charles Everett. A reading, "Who Killed the Grange?" by Mrs. Beattie Harris, and a song by all, "It's a Good Thing to be a Granger," was followed by a pageant.

In honor of the charter members, the pageant, "The Passing of the ### Grange Years," included a candle-

light service in which all members took part. GET THRILL FROM WRITING!

SELF-TRAINED WRITER SELLS FIRST STORY

The editor really is pleased! That's the thought that is thrilling Connie now.

She's been giving herself some genuine training in story-writing, paying attention to her style, vocabulary, human interest, and all such professional details.

And now her first story is sold, the editor enthusiastic! What a reward for something that is more fun than work, anyway!

Let's listen in as this helpful, friendly editor, discusses her tale of a high-school romance:

"You were right to keep strictly within your own experience. You've been watching this high-school crowd, picking up their slang and youthful talk. You've seen the funny side, and the pathetic side, of their efforts to grow up. Now, I think you might strengthen your opening with a little more vivid phrasing, to make sure we get the attention of the reader immediately. And then, in this paragraph..."

His trained eye runs through the manuscript quickly, picking out a few places for small changes. A big help it is to Connie to have this professional criticism, and reassuring to know that she's off to a good start.

Her tone in the story has been light, amusing, young—to fit the subject. Her sentence rhythm has been quick, energetic, like the teenage crowd she describes. Her vocabulary is fresh, keen; not a stock word to spoil the note of youth.

She had to break herself of a habit of conventional phrasing, of writing such trite old expressions as "They wended their way." "A poor specimen of humanity." "It made a pretty picture." "She waited in breathless suspense." "He is the proud possessor of a new car." All perfectly good English, all so worn out by much use that they have no force.

Like the voice of a helpful editor is our 40-page illustrated Home Institute booklet, SELF-INSTRUCTION IN WRITING. A professional editor and writer's advice on day-by-day exercises in style, vocabulary, tone, imagery. Save hours of misguided effort.

Events Around The Empire State

Buffalo, N. Y., April 3 (P)—Charles J. Hunt, veteran of one year's war service, asked the Supreme Court to direct the city to restore his job as a Department of Public Works electrician on the ground that he received entitles him to civil service preference. ## Wicks Introduces Fish Measure

Albany, April 3 (Special).—A bill aimed at permitting the catching of smelts and ice fish in the Hudson river has been introduced in the legislature by Senator Arthur H. Wicks, of Kingston.

Senator Wicks' bill amends the conservation law, so as to permit the taking of smelt and ice fish, not under six inches, in any inland waterway, including Lake Champlain and the Hudson river, at any time in any number.

The bill was referred to committee for further consideration.

Because of the large number of senators who returned to their districts for primary election contests, nothing but non-controversial matters were taken up in either house.

April Meeting of Wiltwyck Chapter

The April meeting of Wiltwyck Chapter, D. A. R., was held on Thursday afternoon at the Chapter House, the regent, Miss Louise van Hovenberg, presiding.

Mrs. St. John, chairman of the Junior Group, reported that their card party had been a social and financial success. Mrs. W. R. Anderson gave a report of the American Legion tea held at the Governor Clinton Hotel. A chapter member who attended the tea spoke of the admirable paper presented at that time by Mrs. Anderson.

Mrs. Finch, chairman of the Americanization Committee, announced that the next naturalization court would be held on May 5, at 2 p. m.

Miss van Hovenberg announced the nominating committee to be as follows: Chairman, Mrs. Virgil E. Van Wagoner, Mrs. W. M. Fossenden, Mrs. G. N. Wood, Mrs. Silas LaFevre, and Mrs. Miram Whitney.

Tentative plans were made for a large card party which will include the playing of other games, to be held about May 12.

It was stated that new flags had been secured by the committee in charge for the marking of soldiers' graves.

At the next meeting to be held in May, Mrs. E. Thomas Boyd, chaplain of the General National Society and a cousin of the regent, would be the guest of honor. A luncheon will be given in her honor on May 7, at 1:30 o'clock, Mrs. Saxe being chairman of the committee in charge.

The guest for the day was Mrs. Drake from the D. A. R. Chapter of Three Rivers, Mich.

Dr. Elizabeth Moore Parsons was then introduced by Mrs. Terwilliger, chairman of the program committee.

Dr. Parsons spoke on "The Medical Work at Twilling Gate", which comprises two islands off the Newfoundland coast. The people came from Devonshire, England, and brought with them and kept their seclusiveness. While in the winter their means of transportation is by dog sleds over the ice, from May to September they travel back and forth by boats. Dr. Parsons told interestingly of Dr. Grenfell's medical mission at St. Anthony, from its inception. Tuberculosis is the worst disease they have to contend with owing to the severe weather conditions, and the lack of the right kind of food. Beri Beri is another disease to be battled with, again caused by lack of fresh foods. Tetanus is prevalent and so are typhoid epidemics in the fall. The funds to carry on the hospital are now provided by a yearly government allowance. Each family pays $10 a year for medical care. While the people themselves do not believe in working on Sunday they have a habit of bringing their entire families to the doctor to be "blessed" on Sundays.

Following Dr. Parsons' interesting talk, the program closed with the recital of The American Creed. The hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. Hancock and Mrs. Groves. The decorations were appropriate to the Easter season and were artistic and pretty.

At The Theatres

Today
Broadway: "Love Before Breakfast." Considered a skillful blend of comedy and sophistication by its producers, this Universal Picture tells of a harum-scarum young lady who is cut down on her proper size by a man whose fistful ability is unquestioned. In fact, in one of the scenes which may be the highlight of the show, the hero uncorks a punch that lands on the heroine with such gusto and marksmanship that she has one of the classic "shiners" ever seen on the talking screen. The dialogue tries to be smart and often is and the acting is above average with Carole Lombard, Preston Foster, Cesar Romero and Janet Beecher all sharing the honors.

Kingston: "Exclusive Story" and "Timothy's Quest." The dramatization of Martin Mooney's crusade against racketeers and vice is the substance of the first picture at the Kingston. Martin Mooney, as you remember, was the New York city newspaper reporter who knew all about the "policy racket" and was hauled into court for refusal to give information. The movie tells of a girl whose father is a "policy racket" victim and how she gets a newspaper to expose the whole rotten mess. Franchot Tone, Madge Evans, Stuart Erwin, Joseph Calleia and Robert Barrat are in the cast.

"Timothy's Quest" tells of a couple of orphans who run away from their home and win the heart of an old maid who keeps them after much excitement. Dickie Moore, Tom Keane, Eleanor Whitney and Elizabeth Patterson are featured.

Orpheum: "Three Kids and a Queen" and "Valley of Wanted Men." Comedy is the main objective of the first picture, a comedy that starts out with a fake kidnapping until it develops into the real thing and causes some lively action. May Robson is fine as the eccentric, millionaire lady and Henry Armetta lends able and ample support. "Valley of Wanted Men" is the other full length feature, an adventure tale with the youthful Frankie Darro featured.

Tomorrow

Broadway: "Colleen." With a group of Warner Brothers' stars all tossed in for box office appeal, the latest of the musical masterpieces proves to be a gigantic, unwieldy mixture of farce, emotional moments, dancing, songs and plain drama. It tells of a bewildered millionaire and his troubles, of a crooner and his troubles and of a lady chocolate dipper and her troubles. The production offers Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Jack Oakie and Joan Blondell in the stellar roles with Hugh Herbert, Luise Rainer, Marie Wilson, Louis Alberst, Berton Churchill, Hobart Cavanaugh and J. M. Kerrigan featured. The picture also marks the screen debut of Paul Draper, sensational Broadway dancer, who gyrates effectively with Miss Keeler during the course of events. With Dick Powell crooning nicely plus the addition of a host of attractive chorus girls, this musical comedy is tuneful and satisfactory entertainment.

Kingston: "Robin Hood of El Dorado." Those who saw "In Old Arizona" and "Viva Villa" will discover this play carries on in that tradition. It lacks the brutality of the latter but some of the scenes almost measure up in their grim reality. It is another tale of revenge, of a man who swears eternal vengeance on those who wrecked his life, and the effective manner in which he realizes his life ambition is powerful and moving picture drama. The entire show is effectively done with Warner Baxter again starred in a role best suited to his talents. Others who help keep the story real and moving through fine characterizations are Bruce Cabot, Margo, Ann Loring and J. Carroll Nash. This show carries a terrible dramatic punch, and devoid though it is of comedy or lightness, it is worth seeing because of its blend of color, stark realism and romance. The production was handled by John Considine, Jr., and directed by William A. Wellman. Orpheum. Same

Friendship Luncheon Was Great Success

The "Friendship Luncheon" held at the Y. W. C. A. at 12:30 o'clock on Thursday, though a decided innovation, proved to be a great success.

The speaker's table seating six or eight persons and tables to accommodate four had been set up and were prettily decorated with flowers so that the assembly hall presented a very attractive appearance as the sixty guests were seated. The luncheon, excellent in all details, was in charge of Mrs. Myron Teller and Mrs. John Matthews. Six young ladies from the National Youth Administration, project, wearing gay little aprons and caps were the efficient waitresses.

Rabbi Herbert I. Bloom and Mrs. Bloom were the guests of honor. Rabbi Bloom being the speaker for the day.

Rabbi Bloom was introduced and all present were welcomed by Mrs. G. N. Wood, president of the Board of Directors of the Y. W. C. A., who also asked Rabbi Bloom to ask a blessing. He asked the blessing with a beauty of reverence for "God, the Father" and "Jesus of Nazareth," full of the finest spiritual insight.

The speaker frankly admitted that he enjoyed speaking, especially to such a group as that before him, who were dedicated to world friendship. He agreed with a recent utterance of Dr. VanLoon who was a member of the Gormand Club, when he advised that it would be well for Americans to learn the art of dining and forget the art of eating as a means of courting world peace over a good dinner where they would not be tempted to disagree and fight.

As a teacher of religion and a human being, Rabbi Bloom said he was chiefly concerned with the dreadful setup of the world today, which is the extreme form of peace.

However while world friendship could be talked about at a dinner, where friends patting each other on the back, saying all was fine, much more that was fundamental and basic was needed. We must understand where we were and where we are now. We cannot afford to have the false conception that all those who think unlike ourselves or are not after our pattern are in their manner of living, wrong. Under emotions our patriotism is apt to make us consider that those who are not of us are against us. Such a feeling is not in any sense World Friendship or mutual understanding. Rabbi Bloom advocated a good will movement with the slogan, "Make America Safe—not for Democracy but—for Difference."

Germany, with its Nazism; Russia with its Communism; Italy with its Fascism might try to inject a narrow-minded serum of intolerance into the lives of their children, but the very essence of Americanism is to be found in the slogan idea.

Even so, Rabbi Bloom would exchange cooperation for tolerance. If one disagreed with him he would want to understand why he disagreed. If possible he would like to convert him to what he—the speaker—would consider was right but he would not say they had no right to disagree. So Americans, whether Christians or Jews, reason together and when they do that they cannot hate each other. But that is what Europe is not doing and the world is not doing.

The speaker had no patience with the old platitude that "Human nature never changes." Fundamental instincts can be directed toward constructive ends. A boy may "gang up" with other boys of his kind and find his place in the underworld or he may become a Boy Scout and do constructive work. The "herd" instinct and feeling either way may result in benefit and not detriment to the boy.

The belief that we can maintain world peace only by being armed to the teeth for fighting was a fallacious opinion. In that way we will never do more than add to the destruction. In case of foreign invasion, people who know, say that airplanes could blow us to pieces before we could use our arms for protection.

Rabbi Bloom said he was not interested in military statistics, being an unreserved pacifist.

Take the case of Germany. The speaker admitted that he had no love for Hitler who had so mistreated his people. But in justice, he had to admit that Hitler was not alone to blame. There was the treaty of Versailles, with Wilson's erroneous idea of "peace without victory," when Germany was formed into submission and denied her own border. Because of envy, fear, hatred, not at all like world friendship, France is truculent with fears of Germany and Germany is truculent with fears of France and both have their guns pointed.

It was the speaker's conviction that we will never change the world until we can change the individual, nor can we change the individual in a vacuum. The individual as a part of society must become amenable to the good in, rather than the hatred of, the brotherhood.

Even the arming to frighten others was a false move. That had been demonstrated by cowboys of the western country. When they came into a town showing their guns it led to riots. And armament races between countries arouse a spirit of tension, a status quo that leads invariably to war. Rabbi Bloom was not favorable to the idea, "America right or wrong." If it is wrong then we should make it right or at least less wrong. Jesus came to give life and to make it more abundant. The prophets taught of life that was good rather than death that was evil, for we can make life richer, nobler while we live.

"What has war done for the modern world?" asked the speaker. "Has it made the world safe for democracy?" "There are twenty-one dictators in Europe today. We fought a war to end war but we have not ended war, as we see today in Europe, the far East and here in the South." Rabbi Bloom told how we tried to stop the German atrocities but there have been worse and more atrocities in the world since the war than during that time. Nor was there any such thing in the world as war giving us minority rights. War is entirely a futile, stupid form of legalized murder.

But the vital question is "What are we going to do about it?" For one thing, let us teach our children to live rather than die for their country. But if we must die for our country let it be through research of science where it has happened that men have died to save countless lives of their countrymen if not of the world. That is living and dying to be constructive for our country. Rabbi Bloom admired the young man who was willing to die for his country but not willing to kill for his country.

When we understand the needs of other people and are willing to talk together nationally and internationally to find some way out of starving existence for people; of we can take our economic matters and settle them through the League of Nations or some different means, we will be well on our way to world friendship.

Rabbi Bloom thought we should have a part in the World Court, for it is wrong to think we can be isolated. There is a vast power for good in an International Tribunal. We must get rid of the idea that people who are not of our mind and background are evil. Though holding no brief for the Japanese or Assyrians, the speaker was convinced that to express the thought that all Japanese are "evil pagans," inflames hatred and but fans the flame of war in the world and destroys World Friendship.

In closing, Rabbi Bloom begged that as a nation and individually we live in the spirit of the Master of Nazareth, for then we will receive God's blessing shown in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man.

Shakeup at Vatican
Vatican City, April 3 (AP)—Prelates said today a major shakeup in the Vatican diplomatic service would be forthcoming soon. Pope Pius was reported going over a list of appointees to some of the most important posts in the church's highly efficient foreign service. Most of the new appointments would be caused by the prelates said, by the fact that the present occupants of the diplomatic posts had been named Cardinals.

NAPOLÉON'S PRISON SAVED FROM ANTS

Termite Horde Routed by French Engineer.

Paris.—Napoleon's home on the island of St. Helena, which was threatened with destruction by the island's horde of termites, has been saved for posterity.

Maurice Descamps of Bordeaux, French engineer, who has perfected a method of destroying termites in buildings, has returned to France from St. Helena, where he successfully rid Napoleon's last home on earth of the pests.

So successful were his operations that the keeper of the Longwood museum issued a certificate to Descamps, which says that the termites have been destroyed after repeated failures of the past. The ravages of the termites are great, most of the old houses on the island are infested with them, and in many cases their woodwork is falling to pieces.

Liquid Killer Used.

The substance used by the French engineer against the termites is a liquid which, while not corrosive, offensive in smell, inflammable, explosive or poisonous to human beings or animals, is fatal to the termites.

Descamps did not discover the liquid. It was first concocted by one of his engineer colleagues, Paul Poutays, who made so little of the discovery that he did not mention it to friends. He used it locally on a small scale and when Descamps learned of it he pointed out to Poutays that if he could really exterminate termites he was in possession of a most valuable discovery. It is with the expert help of Descamps that the discovery since has been exploited.

Pest's Habits Studied.

To concoct a substance fatal to termites was not enough. It was necessary for Descamps to study minutely the habits of the termites, to perfect a successful weapon against them.

Descamps wages his war against the working termites who forage and bring food to the queen, who is the mother of the whole community, the young and the soldiers, who cannot feed themselves. The workers swallow the food they forage and at the end of the expedition they carry it back to the queen and nonworkers who dig, dig the surplus. If deprived of the ministrations, the queen and nonworkers die, and what is even more important, the workers quickly die if they are deprived of consumers for their superfluous food.

Descamps' method is to place a barrier between the nonworkers and their feeding grounds which consists of a layer of Poutays' poison. Every vertical wall of a house under treatment is saturated with a band of poison at the floor level.

Holes are pierced at intervals through which the liquid is allowed to soak into the inner structure of the wall, and as an extra precaution the ground floors and the soil immediately below them are sprayed with the liquid, which is squirted with syringes through small holes pierced in the boards.

Premiums to Increase

Births Urged in Sweden

Stockholm.—A virtual premium on babies has been suggested by a special committee to the government in Sweden to halt the declining birth rate. For the budget year 1937-38 a sum of 6,400,000 kroner (about $600,000) has been proposed, of which 4,400,000 kroner will be paid in amounts of 75 kroner (about $17.75) each at the time of birth, and 2,000,000 kroner in items, not exceeding 300 kroner (about $75) each, to mothers before and after childbirth.

The first sum is supposed to represent the nation's appreciation of motherhood, and would, therefore, be available to all women, except to aliens and those who receive help from institutions.

The second form of aid will go to mothers who have suffered economically from having children, and would be paid out to married as well as unmarried women. The money may either be paid outright or, if the emergency is a temporary one, in the form of a loan.

Woman Rescued by Aid of Short Wave Radio

Kemmerer, Wyo.—Lowell Woods, a forest ranger, stationed at an isolated station in the Wyoming national forest 30 miles west of Daniel, Wyo., credits short-wave radio set installed last year with saving the life of his wife. Mrs. Woods recently became seriously ill. Woods was unable to reach outside help because of deep snow drifts which almost buried his cabin and blocked roads. He radioed his superiors, who opened a trail to the ranger station and sent aid to the stricken woman.

Veteran Gets Package

Lost in the Argonne

Wapato, Wash.—Seventeen years ago, Harry A. Eichelberg, near death as the result of injuries suffered in the Argonne battle of the World war, pain fully crawled into an old hay loft near the battlefield.

He was found before it was too late, taken to a hospital and his life was saved.

He was reminded of the grim incident recently when papers he lost in the hay loft were returned to him at his home here. The papers and faded photographs were found by children playing in the barn.

God of Winds Boards Zeppelin Over Equator

Aboard the Airship Hindenburg, over the south Atlantic, April 3, (AP)—Aeolus, god of winds, appeared aboard this ship "in person" today as the dirigible crossed the equator, and baptized the passengers.

It was the first time either the passengers or the Hindenburg itself, making its maiden flight to South America, had crossed this line.

The crossing was made at 2 43 a. m. (8 43 p. m. Thursday, E. S. T.). The ceremony was commemorated by the appearance of a passenger, disguised as Aeolus, and by distribution of "baptismal certificates" as souvenirs of the zeppelin's flight. The ceremony was preceded by a banquet.

Completes Crossing

Recife, Pernambuco, Brazil, April 3 (AP)—Germany's great new zeppelin, the Hindenburg, flew over Pernambuco at 7 57 a. m. today (4 53 a. m. E. S. T.) completing her first crossing of the south Atlantic ocean. The giant airship, which left Friedrichshafen, Germany, Tuesday passed over this city on the northeastern tip of Brazil, jutting out into the Atlantic, on her way to Rio de Janeiro.

Secondary Highways Bill

Washington, April 3 (AP)—Approaching victory for his nation "farm to market" roads plan was seen today by Representative Bert Lord (R) of New York in the House roads committee's new bill providing $25,000,000 for secondary highways. The bill was reported by the committee yesterday and calls for $125,000,000 for primary highways, in addition to the money for back roads. Lord, a committee member, said the new measure proposed for the first time a federal policy of "getting the farmer out of the mud" by improving feeder highways, rural free delivery routes and school bus routes.

The Massachusetts Supreme Court has ruled that a defendant held for drunkenness or drunken driving has no constitutional right to demand that police call in a physician to pass on his sobriety. "There is no regulation of law," said the Court, "that one arrested for drunkenness be afforded a special opportunity for the preparation and collection of evidence to prove he is not guilty of that offense."

Boom in Buggies Ends Threatened Plant Shut-Down

Lawrenceburg, Ind. (AP)—The buggy business is booming for one of the largest buggy factories in the country located here. The boom began in 1932 and still is going strong. William Knapp, who at 78, guides the destiny of the company he founded years ago, says he sold 900 buggies last year for approximately $75,000. Plant capacity, however, is 5,000 buggies a year.

The company's biggest year was in 1920 after which sales fell off almost to the vanishing point in 1931. Since then it's been different and there's no more talk heard of closing the plant.

Knapp says about 75 per cent of all buggies made are sold in the

Red Hook High School Is Destroyed by Fire

Only the four walls of the brick and tile constructed Red Hook High School are left standing today, following a fire which was first discovered about 2 o'clock Thursday morning.

A truck driver who was passing the school in the early morning hour saw the smoke issuing from a third story room and blew his horn and shouted until he aroused a nearby resident who turned in an alarm.

When the firemen arrived they found the upper part of the building wrapped in flames, which were just on the point of breaking through the roof. A pumper from Rhinebeck came to the aid of the Red Hook firemen and tons of water were poured on the fire from five lines of hose, but the fire had gained such headway that the building could not be saved and it was two and a half hours before the fire was gotten under control.

Important school records, kept in a safe in the principal's office on the second floor were saved, but classroom library books, supplies and equipment were destroyed.

The loss has been tentatively placed at $100,000, fairly well covered by insurance. The original building was erected in 1904. About 1924 two class rooms, a study hall and auditorium were added. About 300 grade and high school students attend the school.

Nations Hasten Air Service Tests; French, British To Meet Nazi Challenge

By CHARLES FOLTZ
Paris (AP)—France plans to move her whole transatlantic air service with the seasons in 1937.
When storms sweep the North Atlantic the tricolor's planes will use the "old" route from Dakar, Africa, to Natal, Brazil, but when the southern route is dangerous the planes will fly the North Atlantic with the international air "combine."
"There's nothing miraculous about a transatlantic crossing for us," said an official of the air ministry. "We've been carrying mail from Europe to South America for years and a North Atlantic service simply means cutting down the risks our pilots encounter during the northern summer."

European Pact Delayed
France is waiting only for "the rest of Europe to make up its mind," according to Louis Allégro, general manager of Air France.
"America has taken the initiative in North Atlantic service and it remains only for Europe to decide what nations shall carry the European end of the task," he said.
Representatives of France's Air France, Germany's Deutsche Luft Hansa and Britain's Imperial Airways have conferred with Pan-American Airways in the United States.

American planes will carry at least half of the postal freight, following present plans, while British, French and German companies will split the European share.
"At present," Allégro said, "the main problem is whether the north or south routes across the North Atlantic would be most practical. We plan to use the southern route, with Lisbon as the European capital of the air lines and with natural bases on the Azores and Bermuda. In preference to hops from Newfoundland to Ireland."

Senator Visits America.
The air ministry is cooperating with Air France in laying plans to operate France's share in the ocean service. They work together on France's "North Atlantic commission," which has sent Senator A. de la Grange to the United States to confer with Pan-American Airways officials.
"When the North Atlantic service begins operation in 1937," Allégro said, "there probably will be six planes—three American, one French, one English and one German. But that depends entirely on the conferences between officials of the four countries."

"In any event the Lieutenant de Vaisseau-Paris, our largest and finest sea plane, will make several trial flights in North Atlantic waters before we begin our share of the service."

By OSCAR WEIDING
London (AP)—With Germany's

The Hindenburg, Germany's newest dirigible, emerges from its hangar. How huge the world's largest airship is may be judged by comparing its bulk with the men grouped around the flagstaff on the roof of the hangar.

huge new dirigible, the Hindenburg, about to start for America, Great Britain is pushing preparations for her first big step in the commercial air conquest of the North Atlantic.

An all-metal, two-decked flying boat and the unique "pick-a-back" combination of a long-range seaplane and a flying boat designed to carry it into the air for launching, are being made ready for trial flights.

Experimental transatlantic flights, looking toward the cooperative regular service of the United States, Canada, Great Britain and the Irish Free State, are planned for the coming summer.

But not until 1938 do British air experts expect the projected regular service of four round-trips weekly to be in operation over what they call "the most valuable but by far the toughest" of the ocean air routes.

"Air University" Busy.
While workmen are speeding construction of the British transatlantic planes, a handful of airmen has embarked upon intensive training at the "air university" at Hamble, Southampton Water. Further groups are to take up the same work until 180 men will have been trained for the eventual regular service.

Full details of the new planes have been withheld by the constructors but it is reliably understood that the new flying boat is designed to be faster but lighter than the American clippers used on trans-pacific flights.

Based on available details, a comparison of the British transatlantic boat and the American transpacific plane shows:

	British	American
Wing span	111 feet	130 feet
Overall length	88½ feet	89½ feet
Height	29 feet	24 feet
High speed	(approx.) 200 m.p.h.	180 m.p.h.
Number of motors	Four	Four
Weight fully loaded	17 tons	24 tons

The British flying boat will be a high-wing monoplane with no external bracing of the wing. Floats fixed to the wing-tips will help preserve stability on rough water.

Short Take-Off Devices.
Four engines will be mounted in the leading edge of the wing, two on either side of the hull.

The boat will be entirely of metal, except for fabric covering small portions of the wing and the tail. It will have a number of devices to insure short take-off and landing runs. These will include controllable-pitch propellers and flaps on the trailing edge of the wing to steepen glide and reduce landing speed.

The great overall height is designed to enable the boat to ride out severe storms without serious harm, in event of a forced landing on exposed water. The engines will be out of reach of all but heavy ocean waves.

Somewhat larger than this plane is the flying boat being built as the "mother" ship or launching plane for the novel "pick-a-back" combination.

Its designer is Major R. H. Mayo, 45-year-old technical adviser of Imperial Airways. British faith in its possibilities is indicated by the fact that a $175,000 company has been floated to exploit the invention.

Double Plane Range Seen.
The "mother" plane, with four 900-horsepower engines, will carry on its back a heavily-laden, long-range seaplane powered with four 350-horsepower engines.

The plan is for them to take off as one eight-engine biplane. When an altitude of approximately 10,000 feet is reached and good forward speed attained, the two machines would separate and the seaplane would continue on its transatlantic voyage alone.

Calculations have been made that the invention should double the range of the seaplane.

Only one "mother" plane will be ready by summer but another "mother" plane to be stationed on the other side of the Atlantic will have to be constructed if the idea is adopted for the transatlantic service.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS &amp; SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Hollywood is curious about Clifford Odets, the young playwright, even though most of Hollywood does not know what he looks like.

The author of "Awake and Sing" and other plays which attracted wide attention in the past two years slipped into town for a vacation, heralded only by a small avalanche of scripts for which studios desired his services. He did not like any of them, but he liked Lewis Milestone, and when he and the director met at a party Milestone interested him in working on "The General Dies at Dawn."

Odets signed to do it for $20,000. It is the largest lump sum he has made.

He was an actor, often a starving actor, for 12 years before "Awake and Sing" backed to the tune of $5,000 by Franchot Tone among others, was produced. Tone came from the same Group Theater as Odets. Also from that theater is J. Edward Bromberg, now young character actor.

Likes Music

Odets, who has longish brown hair brushed back from a high forehead, and is rather good looking, thinks he would have been a great musical composer if he had not been a writer. Beethoven is his favorite artist, he says, although he has no eclectic knowledge of music. In the drama of Beethoven's music, and in Shakespeare, he says he finds help in dramatic composition.

From modern playwrights he "can learn nothing." He thinks Eugene O'Neill "died" after "The Great God Brown." He thinks most critics selected the wrong things to praise in his own plays. He thinks writers who are "clever" can say anything in pictures they may wish to say. But he admits this might not hold true in actual production. He thinks plenty.

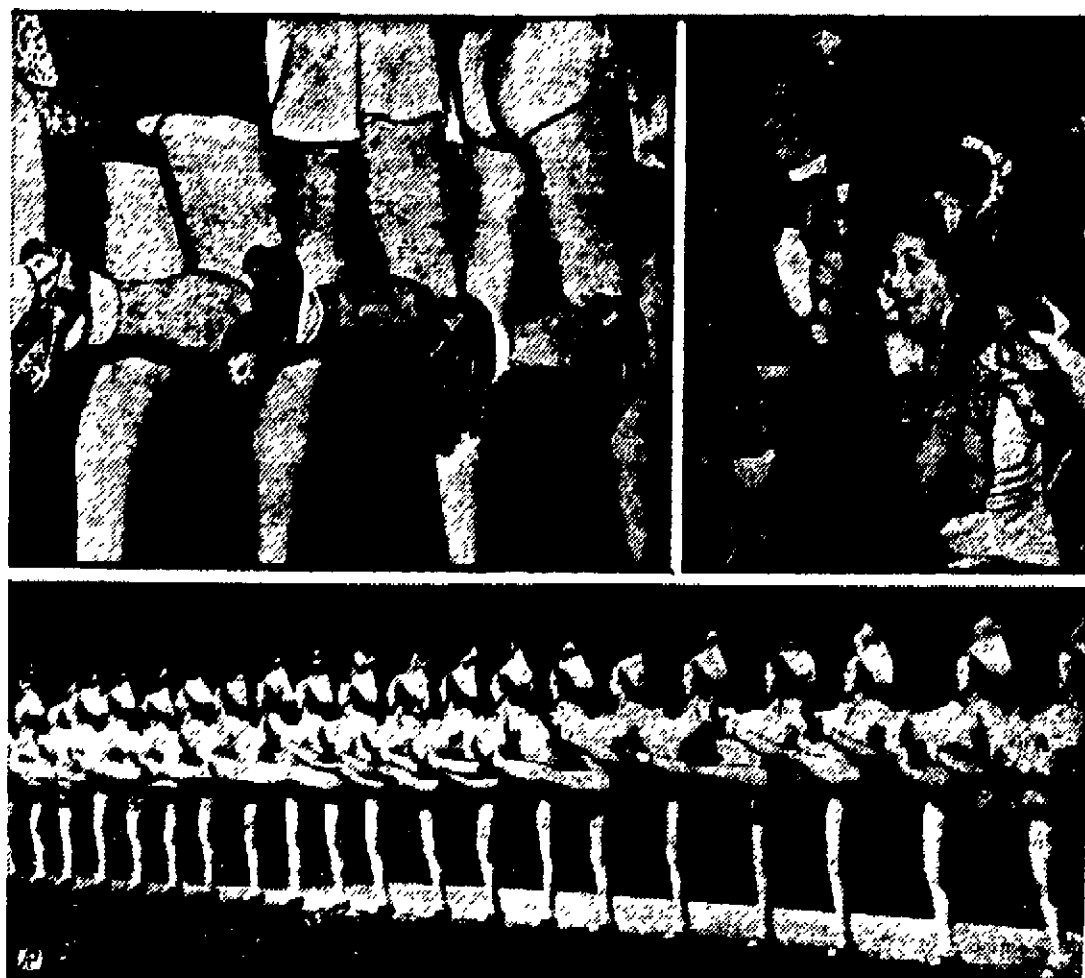

Naturally, he wants to put some of his own plays in pictures, rather than work on the stories and plays of others. In "The General Dies at Dawn" he is not trying to change the melodrama into a preachment. In any sense, of his philosophical ideas about the "system," he never plays, he indicates, he never preaches, but merely shows people as they are—and he fills his work with action and as much natural comedy as possible. He likes to "reach" his audience, and as big an audience as possible—just like the movies.

A Casual Dresser

He dresses casually, goes hatless, often can be seen in trousers and polo shirt, open at the collar. He wears shell-rim spectacles which enhance his resemblance to a juvenile Rouben Mamoulian.

He does not see much of Hollywood. He works at night, 1 to 5 a. m.

Show Girls Mix Wash And Glamor—And Think Of Boys 'Back Home'

The "Rockettes" of the Radio City Music Hall dancing chorus get some exercise (bottom). Well worn soles attest the effort expended in "line" drills for next week's show (upper left). Betty Sassler, Brooklyn, and Beverly Adams, Louisville, prepare for their call (upper right).

New York (AP).—They may be glamorous show girls to the stage-door Johnnies, but at heart the part—and well paid—young women in the Radio City Music Hall chorus are just homebodies.

An aura of domesticity hangs over every dressing room occupied by the "Rockettes," the dancers who make rhythm their business. A clothes-line, strung from radiator pipe to window, and from which dangles an endless array of silk stockings and lacy things, features each room.

All the Rockettes, head-liners in their trade, busy themselves between shows. Some write letters, a few paint or go in for charcoal etchings, others read, play the radio, or—practice dancing.

Like Pajamas.

You'll find them lounging around in 47 varieties of pajama—wide, bell-bottom ones, with flowered prints or startling Mother Goose designs. They spend hours manuevering themselves or wondering whether the boys back home are still pitching horseshoes down by the post office.

Usually they arrive at the Music Hall around 1 p. m. After checking in at the stage door registration booth, they wander upstairs, take some light preliminary exercise, apply make-up, change to the opening costumes and await their cues.

Once they check in they seldom leave until the last show at night. Recreation rooms with pianos and all sorts of games—plus cafeterias and quick lunch counters, easily accessible in the building, make it unnecessary for them even to don street clothes until the going-home hour arrives.

A Glimpse of "Life."

Occasionally, however, they seize the rather long interval between the late afternoon and dinner shows to snatch a glimpse of "life."

Often it's an exciting glimpse. They go out the stage door, scowl around the block, enter through the front door, and settle down for a thrilling movie.

They're crazy about the movie.

Y. M. C. A. Drive Week of April 21-28

The annual finance campaign of the Y. M. C. A. will be held the week of April 21-28. The opening dinner will be held Tuesday evening, April 21, at 6:30. The goal for the campaign is $15,000.

About a month ago a steering committee was appointed by the board of directors of the "Y." C. S. Rowland was appointed chairman with Howard R. St. John and James Guttridge as the other members of the committee.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the directors was held at the "Y." Tuesday evening. The steering committee reported splendid progress. The following officers of the campaign have been selected:

General chairman—Clarence Dumm.
Co-chairman—Howard R. St. John.
Chairman of initial gifts committee—C. S. Treadwell.
Co-chairman of initial gifts committee—A. B. Shufeldt.
Team enlistment chairman—John

Schwenk.
Out-of-town concerns committee—Stanley Winne.
Co-chairman of out-of-town concerns committee—E. J. Trowbridge.
Speakers committee—Dr. Julian I. Gifford.
Church co-operation committee—George E. Love.
Publicity committee—Fred Van Deusen.
General arrangements—Daniel N. Secore.

There will be four divisions as usual but a "Buddy" type of organization will be used. Each division will be composed of 30 men in addition to the chairman and co-chairman. Each worker in turn will secure a buddy to work with him. Herbert Myers was leader of the high division last year, and James Scott, leader of the runner-up last year, will again lead divisions this year. Emil Boessneck, who was co-chairman with the winning division last year, will lead a division this year. H. Lamont Winter comes up from the ranks to lead a division. Already each leader is laying claims for first place this year.

The initial gifts committee will hold its first meeting April 7th. Both Mr. Treadwell and Mr. Shufeldt are very optimistic about the results of their work. They claim that their committee will make the best showing that has been made since 1930.

General secretary, C. S. Schoonmaker, who has directed every campaign for the "Y." except one since 1929, will again serve in that capacity. Boys' work secretary, Noland Fuller, and physical director, Charles Henke, will act as division aids and Miss Olive Kyer will have charge of the campaign office.

The following committee was appointed to arrange for the meeting: Dr. Julian I. Gifford, chairman; Joseph M. Fowler, Clyde Wonderly, Arthur C. Quimby and Robert Nelson.
An effort will be made by Chairman Gifford and his committee to make this a meeting of outstanding importance in association history. Prospective speakers are being contacted and other program features will be arranged.

HORMONE HASTENS GROWTH OF PLANTS

Iowa Scientists Isolate Amazing Substance.

Iowa City, Iowa.—Over the contents of a test tube in a University of Iowa laboratory recently hovered a group of botanists. Excitedly they discussed the unique power of the watery fluid under inspection to influence and control plant growth.

Synthetically produced, the center of their interest was a newly discovered plant hormone, "heterauxin." While not the first to discover or produce the potent organic substance, Iowa's scientists were first to isolate it in quantity; first to experiment with its influence on vegetable and plant behavior.

Applied by Prof. Walter F. Loehwing of the University of Iowa botany department to a variety of plants, the substance produced amazing results—the growth of roots from a lily petal; quick maturing of peas planted in heterauxin-treated soil; extraordinary hardiness in delicate "wax" plants.

Most significant of his experiments, said Loehwing, was that conducted with seeds of garden peas. Seeds planted in hormone-treated earth sprouted no more rapidly than seeds in untreated soil. But the development after sprouting was three times more rapid where heterauxin had been mixed with the soil; root structure was appreciably more sturdy.

Treatment of stems of the sensitive poinsettia plant permitted the normally fragile stalk to be bent double, tied in knots.

Heterauxin, Loehwing said, is one of three recently discovered plant hormones which have induced botanists to renew their efforts to seek to bridge the gap between plant and animal life. In nature the substance exists in minute quantities in annual tissues.

Speculatively, Loehwing foresees possibilities that the new substance may one day become a valued addition to commercial fertilizers; may enable successful crop production in arid or cold climates through stimulation of root development. It might conceivably enable production of two crops in one growing season, or at least greatly expedite harvests, he believes.

Bunched, the gray moss has been put to many uses in domestic life. Architecture of small buildings has been given an odd touch with moss-covered roofs. Fences and walls have been draped with it.

Probably the most ridiculous use the moss was ever put to was when a young Orlando miss tried it out as a bathing suit—but it did make an attractive sun-suit!

Ultra-Violet Rays Trap Crop Pests, Say Experts

Washington.—Ultra-violet ray lamps have succeeded in killing the Japanese beetle, one of agriculture's worst plagues, where every poison and preventive device known have failed, according to a report from the Department of Agriculture.

The beetle, no longer than a coffee bean, digs into the ground in the day time and comes out at night to devour foliage.

Research scientists at the department have discovered that a light, rich in ultra-violet rays, will lure the insects and stun them sufficiently to make them fall into a waiting jar.

The department reported 36,000 beetles were thus trapped in one night.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—For 16 years detective, now sergeant, Charles Hemminger followed the trail of Elton C. Wing, who was wanted for murder in a bank robbery. He caught him in 1932, helped convict him and got Wing a job after he was paroled in 1934.

Headlights Discussed At Luncheon Held by Vanderlyn Battery

As a means of collaborating with the state of New York in its safety drive, the Guide Lamp Company, through the courtesy of Jay Vanderlyn of the Vanderlyn Battery Company, 748 Broadway, had H. L. Scott, one of its headlight engineers, at a luncheon in the Governor Clinton Hotel, Thursday, to demonstrate by an illustrated lecture how important it is to safety to have good headlights.

Headlights and their component parts were minutely discussed by Engineer Martin, who told how important it is to have the proper voltage, bulbs suited for particular makes of headlights, reflectors and lenses that do not throw a blinding beam and form a hazard for motorists driving toward one.

The so-called one-eyed drivers and the danger they bring about were talked of, also the drivers who motor with glaring headlights, not realizing the hazards they present. Most accidents caused by these lights happen after the offending motorist has passed and he never knows about it. Glaring headlights, after they pass, have the same effect as when one goes from daylight into a dark room, said the speaker. The change from the brightness to extreme darkness is so sudden that it blinds the individual.

Accidents caused by poor or improper headlights are greater, said Engineer Scott, than those brought about by defective brakes, according to statistics which show that out of all the accidents last year, 9,720 happened between 5 and 9 p. m., the hours when lights are used as against the daylight period from 6 to 10 a. m. when 2,550 occurred. A survey in several states showed that 54.5 per cent of automobile accidents resulted from improper lighting as against 34.3 for poor brakes. "It is because the fellow behind the wheel thinks his lights are all right," said Mr. Scott, "that accidents occur. He thinks because he can see, his headlights are properly aimed and focused, and they may be blinding other motorists without his knowledge."

The Vanderlyn Battery Company has an apparatus, developed by the Guide Lamp Company, at an expense of $100,000, that tests headlights and assures safety besides making driving at night more convenient for motorists. This apparatus at the Vanderlyn service station on Broadway is equipped with all of the scientific improvements for the only perfect means of testing and adjusting headlights, the speaker said, and urged the motoring public to have their cars tested to insure their own as well as others' safety.

Among those who heard and enjoyed the pleasing and informative talk were law enforcement officers, business and professional men of Kingston and Ulster county, Sheriff Abram F. Molloy, Corporal Baker of the State Troopers, W. L. Fales of the West Shore Railroad, Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy, E. Frank Flanagan, Dr. H. C. Fisher of the Motor Vehicle Bureau, Bert Chambers, automobile dealer, Matthew H. Herzog, hardware dealer, Harry LaMothe of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Berlin Refuses Today Not to Fortify Rhine on Eve of Military Talks

By CHARLES P. NUTTER (Associated Press Foreign Staff)

London, April 3 (AP)—A point blank refusal to promise even temporarily not to fortify the Rhineland was delivered by Germany to the British government today.

It arrived at the foreign office shortly before Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, went to the House of Commons to announce that Great Britain, France and Belgium were ready to fight as allies if attacked by Germany, but that the British government was anxious to discuss peace proposals with Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

It was understood that the final answer was delivered to Eden by Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Hitler's special ambassador, in a five-minute talk just before Eden went to the House of Commons to outline the conditions under which Anglo-French-Belgian general staffs will confer in London.

An authoritative source said that despite repeated urging by Eden, Von Ribbentrop told him that Hitler said Germany was unable to make any "contribution" with respect to fortifications.

The military conversations probably will start next week. The text of letters which Eden gave the French and Belgian ambassadors April 1 and their replies were published in a white paper today.

The assurances among the three governments involve the staff talks in case of an invasion by Germany.

Authoritative sources indicated that Germany's objections to publication of secret material have temporarily delayed a new 30-page white paper in which will be detailed the various British moves to give Germany an opportunity to settle difficulties through diplomatic channels.

Eden assured the House of Commons that technical details worked out by the general staff would be invoked only in case the Reich attacked either France or Belgium.

Such conferences were proposed under the London accord of the Locarno powers, reached after Germany occupied the Rhineland in defiance of the Locarno pact and Versailles treaty, but Hitler, in his proposals for liquidation of the crisis, warned that the Reich considered the proposed conversations most inopportune.

"It must be emphasized that these conversations, which will relate only to the intermediate period of pending negotiations, will be purely technical in character and will not increase our political obligations," he said.

Grand Jury Satisfied Wendel Had No Part in Lindbergh Kidnaping

Trenton, N. J., April 3 (AP)—The Mercer county grand jury was satisfied today, a most reliable source stated, that Paul H. Wendel had nothing to do with the murder of the Lindbergh baby; but it expects to press its investigation of the circumstances surrounding his arrest and confession.

Sensational developments were predicted in connection with the latest phases of the case, when the grand jury reconvenes next week.

The jury is expected to take up then assertions by Wendel that he was kidnaped, the "confessions" that he kidnaped the Lindbergh baby forced from him through brutal treatment, and that he later was held in an institution for feeble minded.

With a terse announcement from the office of Prosecutor Erwin Marshall just before last midnight that the grand jury had voted to "discontinue" further consideration of the case, the status of Wendel, one-time lawyer, was back where it was.

But there was this difference: The jury had made a lengthy inquiry and had satisfied itself of his innocence. The formality of voting a "no-bill," which automatically will discharge the murder complaint on which he now is held, may occur when the jury reconvenes Tuesday.

The necessary papers had not been received last night, and they had started their investigation on published information regarding the "confessions."

"The jurors very probably will consider the possibility that some of the statements made before the jury were perjured," it was stated. "If this is established, appropriate action will be taken."

Asked if that did not set a big task which might extend beyond the end of the jury's term in May, the informant said: "It is probable that it would not take long to complete the investigation of possible perjury. As a matter of fact, I understand it is half completed now."

It was explained that "no further request for a stay in the execution of Hauptmann would be made by the grand jury."

SAYS WENDEL WAS TORTURED

District Attorney William F. X. Geaghan of Kings county is shown in New York telling reporters that Paul Wendel, former Trenton attorney held as a suspect in the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh baby, was tortured in a house in Sheepshead Bay into signing two "confessions." Wendel has since repudiated them. (Associated Press Photo)

Frau Hauptmann Told By Son Witnesses Lied

Kamenz, Germany, April 2 (AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann bolstered his mother's hopes that her son might yet live today with a letter declaring two witnesses who testified against him at his trial at the Lindbergh kidnap-slaying committed perjury.

Condemned to die in the electric chair tonight at Trenton, N. J., he assured the aged Frau Pauline Hauptmann that he believed the execution never would be performed.

"We have proof that two state witnesses committed perjury and will demand their arrest," Hauptman wrote in his long letter from the Trenton prison March 19. Without naming the witnesses, he described them as "one half blind, and the other promised a third of the reward."

"Human hypocrisy may go far, but I still have so much confidence in humanity that I believe it will shy from murdering an innocent," he wrote.

If the state actually persisted in carrying out his execution, he said, "I am not afraid of it."

Earl Finley Reported Better at Hospital

Earl Finley of 25 Adams street was reported as much improved at the Kingston Hospital this afternoon. He was found shortly after 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon lying unconscious on the porch of his home with a bottle of concentrated ammonia lying by his side. At the hospital he was given emergency treatment to which he has responded. Finley was removed to the hospital in the police car. The police had received a telephone call from a neighbor that Finley lay unconscious on the porch.

It Was Moving Day At Local ERB Today

Today was moving day at the local emergency relief bureau headquarters in the former Palen plant on Broadway, but it was not the ERB that was moving out but the men employed by the city to look after the city's end of WPA work. City Engineer James Norton and his force of engineers, who have been occupying quarters at the ERB are now located on the third floor of the city hall, while Max Reben, who is purchasing agent for the city in WPA programs, now has his office located on the third floor of the city hall in the office of the city engineer.

Dedham Changes Its Latin
Dedham, Mass., April 3 (AP)—The inscription on a $12,000 World War memorial, which inadvertently dedicated the monument to Germany, was ordered removed today and $400 was appropriated to change the inscription to honor the town's World War dead. The monument bore the inscription, "Pax Victis"—"Peace to the Conquered." It was voted to change the inscription to read "Pax Victoribus"—"Peace to the Victors."

Among the intelligent boondoggling expenditures of the administration is the spending of $500,000 in the training of housemaids. This will be wonderful news to the taxpayer who not only cannot afford a maid but finds it difficult to buy shoes for the children—Iroquois, S. Dak., Chief.

Bruno Groomed For Death Tonight

was authoritatively reported as ready to vote a "no-bill" in the case.

Hauptmann, who has been living on "borrowed time" for more than a year due to appeals from his conviction and to one 30-day reprieve by the governor, has placed high hope, it was understood, in the grand jury's investigation.

Hauptmann's Confident

He said today, however, that he was "confident and not worrying." In contrast to his previous "last day," he ate a hearty breakfast after a good night's sleep.

His wife, Anna, was reported to be frantically trying to obtain an interview with Governor Hoffman as a last hope.

The jury's action in dropping the Wendel case, and Fisher's effort to reopen it were just two more examples of the unexpectedness that has made the Lindbergh case the most amazing in modern criminal history.

The jury voted neither an indictment nor a "no bill." In effect, it left the status of Paul Wendel, the middle-aged prisoner, exactly where it was when they began consideration of the case Tuesday.

As Governor Hoffman's press aide, William S. Conklin, expressed it, "After all, the action was negative."

During the day and night of star chamber session—a proceeding that began before 10 o'clock yesterday morning and carried on with only a short and afternoon break, until nearly midnight—the jury examined Governor Hoffman himself, attorney-General Wilentz and Wendel, with others.

Brooklyn Wants Wendel
Brooklyn officials asked for Wendel, that they might have his aid in trying to locate the place where he said he was held prisoner by abductors and his torture. They said they knew the street.

Despite all, Wendel remained in jail today charged with the Lindbergh baby murder and Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution tonight for the identical crime. The authoritative explanation of the situation is almost as astonishing as have been many of the previous weird events that have taken place since the curly haired namesake of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was snatched from his crib March 1, 1932, and killed.

The trouble was, it developed today, that the grand jury had no formal complaint against Wendel at all before it.

The formal complaint on which Wendel was arraigned Sunday and to which he pleaded not guilty has not yet come before the grand jury. With no complaint before it, no "no bill" could be voted.

The entire inquiry into the Wendel "confessions" was conducted on the strength of newspaper reports that such "confessions" had been made, and that Wendel had been arrested and charged with the murder. It was explained that frequently the justices of the peace before whom arraignments take place do not submit the papers to the prosecutor's office—for presentation to the grand jury for several days, and often for weeks. The Wendel papers, it was understood, had not reached Prosecutor Erwin Marshall even today.

Using Broad Powers
The grand jury was exercising its broad powers when it plunged into the Wendel investigation Tuesday of its own initiative, for its members realized that Bruno Richard Hauptmann was sentenced to die that same night for the same crime; and they felt that if there was merit in the charges against Wendel, then there must be good reason why Hauptmann's execution should not take place.

It was with this thought that the foreman of the grand jury, Allyn Freeman, telephoned the prison warden almost on the hour set for execution and requested it be delayed 48 hours to permit the grand jury to investigate "interesting new angles" of the case.

The warden acted upon the request and postponed the execution until tonight.

When the warden reached his office this morning he immediately announced the foreman of the grand jury had told him there would be no further request for a stay from that body. Kimberling said he was going ahead with preparations for the electrocution tonight, meanwhile seeking advice from other authorities as to what he should do.

Up to the Governor

That left it squarely up to Governor Hoffman, whose succinct comment less than a week ago—"no second reprieve" seemed to close even the door to Hauptmann's hope.

But many of the official sources were confident that the governor, now firmly committed to a full investigation of the entire Lindbergh case, would find a way to prolong the Bronx carpenter's life, even in the face of Attorney-General Wilentz's opinion that his power of reprieve has expired.

As one official put it: "Did you ever see him (Gov. Hoffman) quit?"

The president of Princeton University, the mayor of Princeton and 30 citizens of that city petitioned the legislature "to investigate whether attempts have been made by public officials or other persons to annul the 'orderly processes of law' in the Hauptmann case."

The petition further urged that the legislature see if "grounds exist for the removal or impeachment" of officials.

Antique and Hobby Show Now Open

Sigmund Rothchild's antique and hobby show at the Governor Clinton Hotel presents a unique collection of articles from stamp displays to shell fish that lay eggs, the latter being as Mr. Rothchild says a real so-called "believe it or not."

In one stamp collection, there is the first stamp ever used in the United States on postage, and in several others are included very rare stamps that are attracting much attention. Japanese prints make up another interesting part of the exhibits and a hand carved brewery truck with six horses, made by Nelson R. Smith, is one of the outstanding pieces of craft in the hobby section.

Coin collectors find plenty to interest them, too, as there are a number of pieces on display at the show which is open afternoons from 2 to 6 o'clock and evenings from 7 to 10.

Socialist Vote In Spring Primary

Most of the election board officials from the districts in the Kingston wards and towns outside the city, had no Socialist votes to report to the board of elections after the primaries Thursday, and up until 1 o'clock this afternoon only 13 districts out of more than 50 had turned in Socialist returns.

Harvey C. Sammons and Julius Petner, whose names appeared on the Socialist ballot for state committeemen, received 13 and 3 votes, respectively. Boris Fogelson and Frank Ellenberger, candidates for district delegates to the national convention had nine and five votes in the order named.

Vaudeville at Reade's Theatre

Master of Ceremonies Joe Martin who brings the "Parade of Amateurs" to the stage of Reade's Kingston Theatre every Saturday, has a real treat for tomorrow night, he says. He will have six acts, five of which are as follows, and look like real good entertainment.

Harry Jordan, novel impersonations of prominent stage and screen stars, Marie Maupin dancer, Paul (Lyon), harmonica player, extraordinary, Julia O'Brien, delineator of songs and Leslie and Lloyd, colored comedy song and dance team.

New Traffic Signal Will Slow Up Traffic

The new traffic lights have been installed on Broadway at East Cooper street, and are now working. The new lights have a tendency to slow up traffic on Broadway. Auto drivers after passing over the top of the Broadway hill on the way up town have been in the habit of stopping on the gas until near the Foxhall Avenue intersection. Now with a traffic light one block to the south of that light they find it necessary to slow up. The new light was installed owing to the expected heavy traffic over the East Chester street by-pass when auto traffic is at its height.

Bruno's Wife Weeps When Grand Jury Asks No Further Stay Today

Trenton, N. J., April 3 (AP)—Stunned by the news that no further request for a stay in Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution, would be made by the grand jury, the condemned man's wife, Anna, hoped frantically today for another reprieve from Gov. Harold G. Hoffman.

Despite Gov. Hoffman's announcement less than a week ago, "there will be no second reprieve," Mrs. Hauptmann wanted to plead with him for her husband's life.

Hauptmann's wife burst into tears when she was informed of the Mercer county grand jury's failure to indict Paul H. Wendel on a charge of kidnapping the Lindbergh baby.

She wept again when she heard that from the grand jury would come no further request to prolong Hauptmann's life.

Belief that the grand jury would indict Wendel had been Mrs. Hauptmann's strongest hope for her husband's salvation.

"My husband will not die in the electric chair. I will see him again," she said confidently yesterday after her "last visit" to Hauptmann permitted under prison rules.

A thrice-repeated situation confronted Mrs. Hauptmann today—the task of watching the clock hands move around toward his death hour. She was awakened at her hotel, usually by the gay strains, "Happy days are here again—and the skies above are blue again," lustily sung by an early-riser who did not know she was across the hall.

The news from the grand jury session that dashed her hopes reached her after midnight, when she returned from a hurried trip to New York to see her 3-year-old son, Manfred.

She had left confident Hauptmann would escape the chair, and told the child his father would be home soon. Mrs. Hauptmann's decision to leave her son, who is under the care of a friend in the Bronx, was made suddenly after seeing Hauptmann at his death cell. A wish to get away from the tension of Trenton was given as the main reason for her flight.

Hauptmann Living On Borrowed Time

Trenton, N. J., April 3 (AP)—How long can a man live on "borrowed time?"

Bruno Richards Hauptmann has, in effect, lived one year and 16 days beyond his law-allotted days. Under the sentence of the court in which he was found guilty of the Lindbergh murder, Hauptmann was to have died the week of March 18, 1935.

An appeal to the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals cancelled that execution date.

The appeal failed; he was again sentenced to die this time during the week of January 13, 1936. The execution date was set for January 17. A 30-day reprieve from Gov. Hoffman saved him.

With the expiration of the reprieve, Hauptmann was sentenced a third time, the death warrant calling for his execution "the week of March 30." The execution was set for the night of March 31.

The execution was stayed by Warden Kimberling of the penitentiary, and a new execution hour of 8 o'clock tonight was set.

What happens tonight remains to be seen.

The hardest thing a photographer has to do taking golden wedding pictures is to make the couple look pleasant.

2 Republicans Ask Speedy Flood Relief

Washington, April 3 (AP)—Two Republican representatives from New York state joined yesterday in a plea to the House to restrict the new omnibus flood control bill to emergency projects so federal aid to stricken areas can be speeded.

Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell and Representative Bert Lord, whose home is in the southern tier flood zone, urged immediate consideration of the plight of the east.

Previously Representative Alfred F. Belter, upstate New York Democrat, had proposed to the Senate commerce committee that the new flood control bill cover only emergency projects already approved for states whose legislatures are in session, so that they might appropriate money for the state's share of the costs.

James Woody Asks for Preliminary Hearing

Youth Arrested in Syracuse on Charge of Theft of Car From Kingston Has Hearing Fixed for April 8—Other Cases in Police Court.

When James Woody, 18, of Wall street, was arraigned before Judge Walter H. Gill in police court this morning on a charge of theft of the automobile of Frank Emberson of St. Remy, he said he would like to have a preliminary hearing on the charge, and the date was fixed by the court for Wednesday, April 8. Ball was fixed at $250.

Woody was arrested by the Syracuse police at the request of the Kingston police department and earlier in the week Officers Van Buren and Kinch motored to Syracuse and returned with the youth. When he was arraigned at that time he said he wanted to get in touch with his mother and for that reason the hearing had been adjourned to this morning.

Woody told Judge Gill that he wanted to have Wilfred Morin of Albany avenue extension in court so that he could question him.

"Don't worry," said Sergeant Simpson of the police department. "Morin will be here as he is our witness."

Morin had sworn to an affidavit that he and Woody had entered the parking grounds of the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation and that they had taken the Emberson car and that Woody had driven it as far as Havana where they abandoned it. Morin was recently held for grand jury action on a charge of stealing the car of W. Kenneth Kukuk, local undertaker, and was arrested at Saugerties where the car was recovered.

The Emberson car was stolen here on February 23.

Abraham Greenspan of Brooklyn, arrested for parking his car in front of a fire hydrant, forfeited $3 cash bail by failure to appear in court.

John McDonough and William Higgins, two strangers, arrested for panhandling, were given an hour to leave town. They said they were on the way to Albany.

Early U. S. Mail Coaches

On September 3, 1800, three commis sioners appointed by President Jefferson to lay out the Cumberland (or National) road met at Cumberland, Md., to begin their work. This was the first federal project for the improvement of internal transportation and communication. By 1818 United States mail coaches were running over the road to Wheeling, then in Virginia. Eventually this highway was built westward through Ohio, Indiana and Illinois to St. Louis, Mo. Of it one writer says: "It carried thousands of population and millions of wealth into the West; and more than any other material structure in the land, served to harmonize, if not to save, the Union."

Sugar Cane Culture

The cultivation of the sugar cane was introduced into the region now embraced in the United States by some Jesuits in 1751. They planted it near New Orleans and in 1758 a sugar mill was built. The first sugar was made in 1764, but the industry never could be brought to complete success. When Louisiana was handed over to Spain in 1763 sugar making ceased. It was revived in 1795 through the efforts of Etienne de Bore, and from that time it has grown steadily into vast proportions.

Doctor Best said the scientists submit themselves to an annual examination during which they examine each other and chemically analyze their blood.

"The idea is that the survivor will write a paper on what caused the death of the others," Doctor Best said.

Jersey Assemblymen To Read Resolution Asking Investigation

Trenton, N. J., April 3 (AP)—Assembly Crawford Jameson, Democratic Assemblyman from Mercer county, said today he would read to the New Jersey House of Assembly Monday night the petition of Princeton residents asking for a legislative investigation to determine if recent developments in the Hauptmann case warranted "removal or impeachment" of some officials.

Such action, it was believed, might well set off in the House the opponents of Governor Harold G. Hoffman, who up to the present have withheld criticism of his activities in the Hauptmann case.

A legislative investigation has been suggested before, both by Hoffman and by Hunterdon County Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, Jr.

Hoffman would have such an inquiry go into all phases of the investigation of the Lindbergh case from the time the baby was kidnapped on March 1, 1932, through the state police investigation, the prosecution and conviction of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, and his own activities in the case.

Those who feel that Hoffman has overstepped the powers of his office, want particularly to have an inquiry into his activities, those of his investigators, the means of financing his investigation, and other connected angles.

There has been talk of an investigation for several months past but all assemblymen have steered clear of the necessary resolution.

The Republicans—Hoffman is one—control both houses of the legislature and even those factions opposing the governor's fiscal policies and his activities in Hauptmann's behalf have felt it unwise to dare to get behind a legislative investigation.

The Democrats have avoided the question because of the fear that it might "back fire."

The petition by Princeton residents was also sent to the other Mercer county assemblymen—Frank S. Katzenbach, 3rd, Democrat, and William P. Howe, Jr., Republican.

Among the signers were: Dr. Harold Willis Dods, president of Princeton University; Professor Edward W. Kemmerer, noted economist; Dr. Abraham Flexner, director of the Institute of Advanced Study, and Mayor Charles R. Erdman, Jr.
